Reagan signs Tax Act; Farms and farmers profit

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — President Reagan signed the Economic Recovery Tax Act, Wednesday — a plan which, according to Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., the international accounting firm, will present immediate tax savings opportunities to a farmer's business as well as to each individual farmer.

The overall effects the Act will have are as yet not entirely clear. But says Steven Hoffman, manager at the accounting firm, "The new tax Act, which is the most radical revision of the tax law since the internal revenue code was ammended in 1954, is going to have a substantial effect on virtually everyone's investment strategies and financial and estate planning. "The potential benefits under the Act will not accrue automatically. To take optimum advantage of the changes, careful planning is necessary and the tax payers should begin reviewing the major provisions of the Act to determine the impact it will have on their financial structure and overall tax planning."

Perhaps the biggest savings for the farm will be the possibility for couples to leave estates worth 1.2 million dollars tax free to heirs and not have federal tax to pay. An entire estate can be given to a survivor with no federal death tax due for surviving spouses of decedants who die after this year.

An estate of up to $600,000 can be left at death with no federal tax by the mid 1980's. It starts rising gradually next year, moving from $175,000 to $225,000.

Also, for decendants to use lower value rules on estates for farms, the decedant needn't have been as active in management operations as was necessary under the Revenue Service interpretation of the law.

Another big change due to the Act is the possibility of writing off buildings over a 15-year period. More depreciation can be claimed in the earlier years than later.

First place winners in the Lebanon Holstein Association Field Day judging contest were: from left, Arden Bliss, Men's Division; Sherry Hoffer, Women's Division; Dale Weaver, Junior 14-19 Division; and Kevin Myer, Junior 13 and Under Division (this youngster agreed with Judge William Pettit, far right, on 100 percent of the placings). Also on hand for the Tuesday evening festivities was Lebanon County Dairy Princess Joanne Weidman.

Lebanon Holstein breeders visit Mil-Harv Farms

BY SHEILA MILLER

BELLEGROVE — The threat of thunderstorms and the intensely-close humidity that enveloped the fertile Lebanon valley on Tuesday evening did not discourage a large number of area dairy producers from turning out at Mil-Harv farm for the annual Lebanon Holstein Association field day.

As the dairy families gathered for a fun, informative evening, the uncomfortable weather disappeared as the sun slowly sank below the rooftops of the nearby village homes. But this daily event went unobserved by most of the dairy producers who were gazing intently at three classes of Holsteins rather than a hazy sunset.

The black and white subjects of close scrutiny were the 3-year-olds, dry cows, and heifers belonging to Harvey T. Bomgardner and family. Harvey and Mildred have been farming at the 140-acre home farm since 1947 when they took over for his father

The current operation, which includes son Mark, 31, and family, son Dave, 18, and daughter Jane, 21, has increased by an additional 100-acre farm, along with another 100 acres of rented ground.

The yellow Dutch-style barn that has been expanded over the years with freestall additions holds Mil-Harv's 104 head of registered Holsteins along with their 75 head of young stock. The 116 stalls are of various designs, some hanging, some homemade, with elevations as high as 17 inches. "I believe in having the cows up and out of the manure," Harvey explains.

The Bomgardners raise all their own feed, 100 acres of alfalfa and 100 acres of corn for haylage and silage with the rest planted to cereal crops. The grain is ground at the farm and batch-mixed — the only thing added that's not raised by the Bomgardners is the protein — soybean meal.

When it comes time to feed the milking string, not every cow is treated the same. According to son Dave, the cows are split into two groups, high and low, based on production. While they're in the parlor, the high cows are fed 15 pounds of concentrate. Out in the bunk, they receive an additional 5 pounds of concentrate with 30 pounds of corn silage and 20 pounds of haylage.

This was the second time in 20 years the Lebanon Holstein breeders were guests at Mil-Harv farm. In those two decades, however, the farm has seen considerable changes and has led the way with innovations.

According to Harvey, his operation was one of the first in the county to have a milking parlor. His first one was installed in 1954, and later replaced in 1970 with a double-six herringbone. He recalls with pride how he had the first bunk feeder in the county — built in 1957 and was the first to install contour strips in his fields. And he

Co-ops, farm groups take stand on HB 767

HARRISBURG — A total of ten farm organizations, dairy cooperatives, and individual farmers testified Wednesday during a hearing before the House Agricultural and Rural Affairs Committee. The session was called to discuss House Bill 767 which would amend the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Market Act of 1968, PL 359, No. 179-1968

Introduced by Representative James L. Wright, Jr. (R-Bucks, 142nd) on March 9, 1981, the bill has met with delays through the course of legislative action. However, Committee Chairman Joseph Grieco (R-Lycoming, Northumberland, 84th) stated he hopes to have the bill on the calendar before the end of September.

What has made HB 767 create such a stir on its way through the democratic process is the fact that this bill would call for some dramatic changes in the agricultural commodities marketing program.

It would:

- expand the meaning of the term 'producer' to include corporations, associations and other business units in addition to individuals;
- eliminate any reference to volume in the voting of a proposed marketing program. Approval of a program will occur if two-thirds of those voting vote yes on the program;
- eliminate the provision which provides for block voting of a cooperative for its members. Every affected producer would be granted the opportunity to vote;
- eliminate the section that would cause the Secretary of Agriculture to terminate a marketing program when more than 33⅓ percent of the affected producers requested such termination; and
- reduce to three from five years the length of time a marketing program must be in effect before the Secretary of Agriculture must call for a

28,000 DeKalb Layers

Mrs. Fink explains to Moyer's Chicks, Inc. representative, Harold Mishler why she's pleased with the DK Layer: "I'm looking for the best bottom line bird I can get. Three important economic "edges" this bird gives me are: (1) early production with good sizing (means lower pullet cost til they start paying their way) (2) excellent liveability and quiet temperament (less than ½ per cent per period means more eggs per hen housed (3) excellent shell and interior quality.

I also appreciate Moyer's service personnel whose interest doesn't stop just with the sale.

I'm pleased to say I've asked Moyer's to grow me DK replacement pullets for my second layer house."

Poultry markets at a glance

Eggs

Eastern markets closed in a weak position although some trade sentiment was trying to show a little confidence due to anticipation of the first of the month business. Cartoned egg movement is slow, pricing is extremely competitive and supplies are heavy and burdensome. Southern producers picked up a little extra shipping demand for class 1's in Texas and Western Pennsylvania. Nest run breaking stock was increasingly available in the southeast and central states but most breakers are indifferent. The market is steady in Southern California. Large remain in plentiful supply but mediums are in balance with needs. Northern California prices will advance on mediums and hold steady on other sizes for Monday delivery.

Broilers

Most marketing areas are about steady today at the new levels of trading. As of this afternoon, orders from terminals and locally will not clear today's production at some processing plants. Advance inquiry indicates that uncommitted product is available out of next Monday to Wednesday kill. Processing confidence will be somewhat abated unless some fortuitous activity develops over the weekend. Live supply for the industry is fully adequate. Temperatures have moderated in most production areas and weights are mostly in a desirable range.

Turkeys

Market weak on hens, steady on consumer toms, steady to firm on institutional toms. Inquiry and trading light centering on the West Coast on a fair volume of packer label 16-24# toms at 72 cents for August shipments into the Bay area. Light interest in the Midwest on a fill in volume of hens for current features. Inquiry in the East improved slightly on fresh hens, slow on frozen hens. Demand for institutional toms from the East on 26-34# toms at firm prices Offerings light and some inquiry going unfilled. Offerings heavy on hens, adequate on consumer toms Activity on parts centered in the East on export shipments with livers moving at 42½ cents, hindquarters at 29½ cents delivered Southeastern port. In the midwest, interest on drumsticks at 27 cents, full cut wings at 26 cents and thigh meat at 63 cents delivered. Several loads of breast meat moving East at $1.80 for late August. Canner pack interest slow. Offerings adequate to ample. Retail features light on whole turkeys, improved slightly on parts. Attractive promotions in the Midwest on grade A hens at 59 cents per pound.

Blocking block voting

If you normally don't pay any attention to politics, it would be a good idea for you to make an exception with HB 767, the act that caused quite a turnout at Wednesday's hearing of the House Ag Committee.

This piece of legislation, although it appears rather harmless on the outside, could potentially pack a powerful blow to ag commodity co-ops — stripping them of a power they now can wield in making marketing program decisions and giving it totally to individual farmers

This power struggle has pulled the major dairy cooperatives out into the open, even though Pennsylvania as yet has no marketing referendum affecting milk The question of whether the proposed milk referendum can pass if co-ops lose the option of voting for their members who elect not to vote was called.

It could mean another defeat for the referendum. But it would be the wishes of the producers who cast their ballots that would determine the final outcome, not the block votes of a few cooperatives.

Fruit co-op representatives and the potato growers co-op also oppose HB 767 and the elimination of block voting. Even though their referendums historically have passed with individual growers voting in favor of the marketing programs, the co-ops nevertheless appear to fear losing power

The disturbing thing about the co-ops' stands is that they are upset about giving the vote solely to the producer — the one who is most affected by any marketing decisions in the end. Certain co-ops have gone on record stating they don't feel farmers will exercise their right to vote in a referendum — that those who don't vote are indifferent to the issue, not opposed to it

So, if a farmer who is a co-op member chooses not to vote, the co-op will do it for the farmer. In the face of the co-op's block of votes, what chance does the independent producer have of making any impact with one vote? Farmers who aren't co-op members who opt not to vote don't have their votes given to another independent to cast — it's a once and done decision.

Even those co-op members who might have voted in the referendum may toss out their ballots after they discover their views are opposite those of the block voting 'big-brother'. They see their vote as a futile attempt to fight the establishment.

The co-op's apathy argument may have some ring of truth to it, however it doesn't justify our lawmakers to take away any individual's rights to vote or not to vote if they so choose Every producer must be treated equally — one person, one vote, whether a co-op member or not

What it all seems to boil down to is that co-ops don't trust farmers to make the right decision for themselves They say they're too busy to understand the details of important referendums and other legislation affecting them. They say they don't care about marketing programs that will help to promote their products as much as the co-ops do — they're apathetic and can't be relyed on to vote, even if they're opposed.

Isn't this a twist? Co-ops not trusting their members to make their own decisions, when farmers have trusted co-ops to make the right decisions — sometimes for the second time around after an expensive lesson is paid out of each producer's pocket.

And, if the co-op is operating above the board, it would have to poll its members before casting the block vote anyway. So, let's save some time and energy, and let the farmers do it for themselves in the first place.

As was pointed out by a legislator at the hearing on Wednesday, the argument that the present process of block voting is as representative as our state and federal government where someone else does our voting for us "doesn't hold". Rather than each representative receiving one vote for the people he or she represents, the block voting system would allow other representatives in their party to vote for them in their absence or if they decided not to vote This, he said, is not the way it works.

All things considered, we support HB 767 and the sole right to vote on marketing referendums being given back to the farmer, regardless of affiliation

However, we feel the vote should still be based on volume so that those farmers most affected by a marketing program would not be outvoted by small scale producers whose livelihoods don't depend on farming As the bill now stands, volume would no longer be a criteria

The ⅔ vote in favor of a referendum in order for passage is adequate, and reducing the review period to 3 years instead of 5 years seems to be more in tune with our fast-paced world. If farmers don't review their marketing program and the need to adjust to economic conditions more frequently, they may soon find themselves in the same squeeze that American auto manufacturers experienced when they didn't shift to economy cars soon enough to beat the competition.

We are giving farmers the vote of confidence they deserve and earn each day as they continue to survive in a market world of controlled prices where costs can't be passed on to consumers.

Farmers make their own management decisions, some involving hundreds of thousands of dollars, on a daily basis. The individual right to vote or not to vote on a marketing referendum is theirs, and it's time the co-ops and farm organizations listen to the voices of those they say they represent.

TO ATTEND AG PROGRESS DAYS

Most farmers do not need much prodding to visit an agricultural show whether it is in the county or halt way across the state.

And, since 1976, tens of thousands of persons have jammed the Pennsylvania State University's Rock Springs Agricultural Research Center, nine miles west of Boalsburg on Route 45, to attend the annual Ag Progress Days. The dates are August 25-27. Activities start at 9 a.m. and end at 5 p.m. - on August 26 they run till 7 p.m.

This year's show should be one of the biggest and best ever. Approximately, 250 commercial companies will be exhibiting their products for home, farming, and country living. These include buildings, farm machinery, silos, feeds, crop seeds and farm and home supplies.

Featured exhibits include energy and resource efficient animal and crop production. Back again will be special exhibits and working demonstrations in the areas of on-farm waste disposal, soil and water conservation and safety.

Plan to attend, it will be worth your time.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W ALTHOUSE

ARE YOU IN OR OUT?

August 9, 1981

Background Scripture:
Deuteronomy 29.1-15.
Devotional Reading:
2 Samuel 7:18-22.

A little boy was being guided (dragged?) through the museum of Natural History by his mother. "And next," she assured him, "we are going to see homo sapiens." But, when at last they stopped before the exhibit, the little boy protested, "That's not homo sapiens, that's a man!" It took the patient mother quite some time before she was able to explain that he too was a homo sapiens. It astonished him to realize that, without knowing it, he had been a homo sapiens all along.

What You Have Seen

The little boy's experience was not as unique as it may sound. Lots of us discover from time to time along life's road that we are part of something we heretofore didn't know even existed. We are all God's children, even if we don't acknowledge him as Father. All of us bear his divine image, even if we don't acknowledge him as creator.

So it may be with God's covenant people: we may be members of that group without thinking of ourselves in that light. "Covenant people" is not a popular term in Christianity today. Few of us think ourselves as being part of the convenant people of God, but that doesn't mean we are not—we simply may not recognize that we are.

What makes for a covenant people?

Deuteronomy 29 gives us some clues. For one thing, covenant people are those who have experienced the grace and power of God in their own lives. As Moses put it to the people of Israel in the land of Moab, "You have seen all that the Lord did before your eyes in the land of Egypt...the great trials which your eyes saw, the signs, and those great wonders..." (Deuteronomy 29:2,3). If you have seen anything of the power and grace of God in your life, you belong to the convenant people—and if you haven't, you simply haven't opened your eyes and ears to God's presence.)

Do the Covenant

Another test, according to Moses' criteria, is whether or not in your life you are doing what God wants you to do. "Therefore be careful to do the words of this covenant," (29:9). We may not be consciously aware of trying to perform our covenant responsibilities, but if we are trying to do Gods will in our lives, that is an indication that we are one of his people.

The third test, according to Moses is an awareness that we are part of something beyond ourselves. We may not think of that "something" as God's convenant people, but so long as we are aware that others have come before us, that we are now one with others throughout the universe, and that others will come after us, we are in truth within that great company of God's people bound together by his love and grace.

Now Is The Time

They will reach their peak numbers about mid-August. These are the small, yellowish green beetles found on most kinds of blossoms and also on cornsilk.

The damage to the roots of corn plants, caused by the small white larvae, is over for the season.

The adult beetles move about quite a bit in search of pollen but they eventually return to corn fields to deposit their eggs. The eggs are laid in the soil near the base of the corn plants. Most are deposited before September 1.

Farmers can get a reading on the number of beetles in their fields sometime between August 10 and August 20. This will provide a guideline for the following year Unless there is an average of two or more beetles per stalk during the period in August, the potential for root damage in the same field next year will be slight.

TO FLUSH EWE FLOCKS

Sheep producers in this part of the country should be planning for the 1982 lamb crop. The starting place is to have healthy ewes and a good ram. The practice of "flushing" the ewe flock several weeks prior to the breeding season is recommended in order to get more twin lambs.

This refers to the feeding of extra grain, or the ewes having access to lush grass-type pasture in order to bring them into a gaining condition. Ewes that are not thrifty at breeding time will be more likely to throw only a single lamb. The control of internal parasites should be given attention prior to the breeding season.

TO THINK ABOUT HIGH QUALITY SILAGE

The quality of your corn silage is determined largely by what you do at filling time says Glenn Shirk, our Dairy Agent. The quality you put up is the quality you'll have to live with for a long time as you feed it out, that affects cows' production and your profits.

Moisture at time of harvest is very important. The desired range for good fermentation is 60-65% for tall silos and 65-70% for stacks, trenches and short silos. Beyond these ranges, you'll have more seepage, excess heating, reduced digestibility and palatability and more spoilage. At this desired moisture, the lower leaves may be dry and the kernels are in the early dent stage - not hard. When the kernels become hard and moisture drops to 55% digestibility may be reduced 10% or more. That's costly!

In an attempt to crack hard kernels, you cut the silage too fine and destroy some of its "forage benefits"; the fine silage passes through the rumen too rapidly for cows to get full benefit from it. Cows ruminate less on fine silages; thus, less saliva is produced, and fat tests drop. You've lost again!

So length of cut and sharp, properly-set knives are essential, too. An ideal knife setting would be 1/2 inch when moisture is in the high 60's, 3/8 inch in the low 60's, and 1/4 inch below 60% Lastly, fill rapidly, use a distributor, pack well, and seal.

Workshop on goats

PHILADELPHIA — A workshop on the production, processing and products of goat's milk will be held at the Eastern Regional Research Center, 600 E. Mermaid Lane, Philadelphia, August 11-12.

The two-day affair will highlight advances in goat milk use, which is on the threshold of becoming a more important agricultural product.

Goats are increasingly important in the worldwide effort to eliminate hunger and malnutrition. Their small size, compatibility with humans and adaptability to marginal lands also give them economic importance in the U.S., where goat associations have grown from fewer than 500 members to more than 10,000 in the past two years.

Among the subjects discussed will be: Biochemistry of goat milk; Milk handling practices; Alternatives in goat dairying; Milk record use for genetic evaluation.

For more information contact Andrew Walker, N.E. Regional Information Office, Agricultural Research Service, USDA, Beltsville, Md. 20705, (301) 344-3530.

4-H State Achievement days

LANCASTER — The Pennsylvania State University campus will provide the setting for 4-H State Achievement Days to be held next week, August 10-13.

Four-H'ers from across the state will gather to represent the county and their individual projects, and will compete for state honors.

Over 50 types of 4-H projects will be represented there, with the most popular being archery, clothing and textiles, dairy judging, flower judging, gardening, livestock, poultry, cooking and vegetable judging.

State Achievement Days provides an excellent opportunity for 4-H members to be recognized for their achievement while competing in a statewide event. They will also have a chance to become acquainted with 4-H members from other counties. The members will be able to visit Penn State's campus to get a first hand look at college life.

Oxford Holsteins top Chester Show

GOSHEN — Two Oxford area farms captured the four top placings at the Chester District Holstein Show. Richard Breckbill's four year old Breck-A De Kenny Top Pop was named Grand Champion of the Chester County Holstein Club show held here during the Goshen Fair last week. Breckbill's cow out-placed a total of sixty-three animals.

Reserve Champion went to a relative newcomer to the show circuits, Oxford's Carmen Freese's senior two year old, Glee-Hi Pete Elite. The Straight-Pine Elevation Pete daughter was the Grand Champion last month at the Chester County 4-H show at Kimberton.

Freese's sister, Karen showed the Junior champion, a Creek Bluff Elevation Lester daughter, Glee-Hi Creek Tosey.

Ed Breckbill, Oxford, exhibited the Reserve Junior Champion, a Tiho Kit Builder daughter. Breckbill's entry was an intermediate heifer calf. Judge Paul Dann, Collegeville, selected the younger animals over the yearlings for the junior champions.

Premiere Exhibitor and Breeder went to Rocky-Side Farms, Carl Yoder family, Elverson.

Jeff Darlington, Pocopson, captured the showmanship first place in the 9 to 11-year-old category. Fitter for that group was Richard Talley. Helen McCahon, Downingtown, took both Fitter and Showmanship honors in the 12 to 15-year-old class. Tom Roth placed first in Showmanship and Karen Freese placed first in Fitting in the 15 and over category.

New inspection mark identifies horse meat

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Horsemeat and other equine meat products will be identified with a hexagon-shaped inspection mark under a new U.S. Department of Agriculture regulation.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said current federal meat inspection regulations require that official plants in this country use hexagon-shaped inspection marks for equine products, with circle-shaped marks applied to other species.

"This action will carry over this same distinction to equine products which have passed import inspection and eliminate misidentification of these products from other species," Houston said.

The regulation will help stop the accidential or intentional substitution of horse, mule or other equine meat and meat food products for that of other species, such as cattle, sheep, swine and goats.

Previously, all imported meat products had a circle-shaped mark, regardless of the species of the meat.

Pa. farmers keeping busy harvesting fruit, vegetables, grain

HARRISBURG — Rainy, cool weather during the week ending August 3 gave way to warmer, dryer conditions, but left Commonwealth farmers with only four days suitable for field activities, according to the Pennsylvania Crop Reporting Service.

Farm field activities included harvesting vegetables, peaches, apples and small grains, baling straw, making hay, digging early potatoes, topping tobacco and clipping pastures.

The snapbean, cabbage, sweet corn and early tomato harvests continue across Pennsylvania. The harvesting of apples and peaches also continues with the peak season peach varieties just now getting ready to pick in the southern region. Grape growers in the central region report some Japanese beetle damage.

Topsoil moisture across the commonwealth was rated mostly adequate to surplus with some short areas reported. The north rated topsoil moisture 67 percent adequate, 28 percent surplus and five percent short. The central region rated moisture supplies 86 percent adequate, nine percent surplus and five percent short, while the south rated topsoil moisture 85 percent adequate and 15 percent short.

Corn throughout most of Pennsylvania is tasseling and silking with an average height reported as 74 inches, 14 inches higher than a year ago at this time. The average corn height in the northern, central and southern regions was 71, 73 and 79 inches respectively.

The barley crop statewide is reported to be 94 percent harvested with the remaineder of the crop turning ripe. Southern and central farmers reported their barley harvest to be virtually complete, while northern growers reported the crop to be 87 percent harvested and 13 percent ripe.

Rainy weather hampered wheat harvesting activities statewide as farmers reported wheat 83 percent harvested, 15 percent ripe and less than five percent turning yellow. The south reported the wheat harvest to be virtually complete. The central region reported wheat 87 percent harvested and 13 percent ripe, while the north reported the crop 66 percent harvested, 28 percent ripe and six percent turning. There were scattered reports of decreased yields due to wheat scab and powdery mildew.

For the first time this summer the oat harvest statewide fell behind last summer's pace. The oat crop was reported as 39 percent harvested, 36 percent ripe, 22 percent turning yellow and less than five percent headed. The south reported oats 64 percent harvested, 35 percent ripe and less than five percent turning, while the central region reported the crop 50 percent harvested, 41 percent ripe and nine percent turning. The north reported oats 14 percent harvested, 33 percent ripe, 47 percent turning and six percent headed.

Farmers experienced uncooperative weather during the week as the second cutting alfalfa harvest had progressed to only 69 percent completion, compared to last year when the harvest was 74 percent complete. The south reported the harvest 92 percent complete, the central region reported the harvest 73 percent complete and the north reported the harvest 43 percent complete. Many operators still report heavy populations of leaf hoppers in their fields.

Hay quality in the state is mostly fair to good with some poor areas reported. Feed from pasture was rated average to below average in the state. The south rated pastures 77 percent average, 15 percent below average and eight percent above average. The central region rated pastures 79 percent average, 11 percent above average and ten percent below average, while the north rated pastures 72 percent average, 14 percent above average and 14 percent below average.

Ag speaks out on pros and cons of

Dairylea

Clyde Rutherford
President
Dairylea Cooperative
Pearl River, N.Y.

This thing we call "bloc voting" is nothing more or less than the kind of representative voting that takes place in government, churches, school boards, corporations, and other business and social institutions all over the nation. It is a mystery to me why a bill to curtail representative voting is being championed by a farm organization which makes policy decisions by board of directors action as a matter of routine.

I'm sure that this sponsoring organization will say that it goes to the grass roots for all of its policies. Well, so do the dairy cooperatives. We are structured into locals, districts, very often subdistricts. We have delegates elected by members. We have resolution committees who receive members' proposals. We hold annual meetings at which delegates vote on all major policy matters. And so on.

From this structure, we have established policies relative to milk promotion, marketing orders, pricing, and other industry issues. As these matters require decisions, the Board of Directors is empowered to act on them. And if, as board members, they don't represent the will of a majority of members, then the members can throw the rascals out at the next election.

The Pennsylvania legislature in 1961 passed P.L. 1541, No. 657 which required that in voting on state marketing programs, co-ops must inform members ahead of time about what position is being taken. Members have the right to vote differently from their co-op and their vote would then be deducted from the total vote of the co-op.

This is a tedious and cumbersome attempt to circumvent the representative voting that should be accepted as the proper function of a cooperative. Nevertheless, it was voted into law. Now, this weakened version of representative voting is to be eliminated altogether and replaced by a law which forbids representative voting by co-ops.

And so we come full circle to where the divide and conquer experts can again skillfully play on a minority of farmers and thereby exert control — in this case, control over the State's marketing programs.

Without the ability to use representative voting, it is easily predictable that we could wind up before every referendum in a war of propaganda which could be won by the most aggressive yet irresponsible minority group. It is far easier to rally support for a catchy slogan than it is for a well thought out, unsensational but constructive program.

Representative voting — bloc voting if you prefer to call it that — protects producers from rule by militant but often misguided minorities. It relieves producers of the almost impossible task of operating a farm and at the same time following in intimate detail the complications of commodity economics. It guarantees that voting on issues will be by a substantial part of the affected commodity group, and it is totally in harmony with the democratic processes which prevail in this country.

I urge the Legislature, before striking a blow against representative voting, to remember the statement by Supreme Court Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes in 1915. In a case involving a question of voting rights, he said: "Where the rule of conduct applies to more than a few people, it is impracticable that everyone should have a direct voice in the adoption. The Constitution does not require all public acts to be done in town meeting or an assembly of the whole. Their rights are protected in the only way that they can be in a complex society, by their power, immediate or remote, over those who make the rule. There must be a limit to individual agreement in such matters if government is to go on..."

I urge the Legislature not to approve House Bill 767.

Franklin Dairy Producer

My name is Barbara Woods. My husband, children and I operate a dairy farm in Franklin County. We're milking 60 head of Holsteins.

My husband and I belong to Pennsylvania Farmers Association and Pennsylvania Farmers Union. We are past members of Eastern Milk Producers Co-op and belong to several other agricultural cooperatives. I am a member of the Franklin County Board of the Penn State Extension.

I know where my county stands on marketing programs. We're not against marketing programs, but we don't want them force fed.

Every producer should have the right to vote or not vote. Should I choose not to vote, I blame only myself for whatever happens. And I can do something about it by use of my vote on the next referendum

When a cooperative is allowed to block vote for its membership, my control power is virtually lost. That vote is cast by a board of directors, who are in turn elected by a delegate body. I am two steps and many numbers removed to try to change that vote. I can affect only indirectly one watered down vote.

If cooperatives truly feel that their vote is representative of their producers—they have nothing to fear. The producer will vote according to the way the co-op would have voted.

As elected officials, all of you know the difficulty in getting people to vote. Let's not take that right away from anyone, especially not the producers. It's their money and operation you are toying with. Lets make farm organizations and cooperatives do their homework and get the producer to vote.

Today, more than ever, with escalating fuel and production costs and decreasing milk supports, a two-thirds approval is needed for passage of a marketing program. A simple majority is awfully hard to swallow when it affects one's income, but a two-thirds is hard to argue against. A two-thirds passage doesn't make it more appetizing. But one doesn't lose, feeling that an awful lot of farmers felt as strongly about it as you did. The smaller the producer, the more critical these deductions may be in his operation. His vote is just as important to his operation as a large producer's vote and should be counted as such.

Marketing programs should not be considered lightly. Anything that affects my income affects my operation and I'm sure that's true of all producers. A marketing program can cost production from several hundred dollars into the thousands. My dollar investment is very important.

The accountability of a marketing program should be measurable. If, within three years, the marketing program is not showing returns for its investment, a referendum should be called. I'm sure Pepsi doesn't run promotion or advertising programs three years before pulling it if it isn't productive. If things are going well with the program, it will be continued. I feel a three year recall will strengthen the marketing program by making it more accountable to the producer.

In closing, I strongly feel that all of the changes offered to the Agriculture Act are extremely beneficial to the producers. If cooperatives are truly representative of their producers — and if farm organizations are truly representative of their membership — passage of House Bill 767 will only stand to strengthen their position because it is truly the position of the producer.

However, if that position is not truly reflective of the producers position and House Bill 767 is defeated, you have given away the producers right to vote and his right to fair representation.

Either way you vote on House Bill 767, the cooperatives win. The co-op will block that way or the producer will vote the way the co-op would have. However, if they do not represent their producers, and they very well may not, your opposing vote will cost producers their vote.

Please support House Bill 767. You have nothing to lose The producer does.

Inter-State

My name is Daniel L. Martin. I am a dairy farmer from Manheim, Lancaster County and vice president of Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative, 1225 Industrial Highway, Southampton. Inter-State represents over 2,800 Pennsylvania dairy farms and over 3,300 dairymen in the Middle Atlantic Region.

As I understand the issue facing us, the proposal is to eliminate the procedure whereby cooperatives can collectively represent their members through the so-called "bloc vote" procedure. This proposal would only permit individual voting and would deny any cooperative the representation right which is given all corporate Boards and Legislatures.

Dairy cooperatives consider the privilege of "bloc voting" as a vital tool to support the federal and state marketing programs which assist the industry and cooperatives in producing and marketing an adequate supply of pure and wholesome milk at all times.

The application of "bloc voting" is an extension of the democratic process of representative voting from the farmers to their elected Board members. As stated earlier, this is the essence of our cooperative institutions and government bodies. There is no sound or logical reasoning which would lead one to deny this procedure to cooperative decision making.

Over the years, dairy cooperatives have supported "Bloc Voting" for the following reasons:

Bloc voting enables cooperative members to take unified action on matters of vital importance to them;

Bloc voting gives the cooperative the total strength of its producers since all are counted in the vote; and,

Outside interests cannot coerce individual cooperative members to counteract the aims of the group.

Oppenents of the "bloc vote" advance the following arguments:

Bloc voting prevents individual action by a dessenter - (This argument is answered by the methods used in referenda on milk promotion plans in Pennsylvania);

Some feel that cooperatives have too much power relative to non-members; and,

Cooperatives can control the provisions in marketing plans.

It seems to me that the last two points are largely unfounded as they affect dairy farmers. The proportion of members to non-members is a result of years of marketing practices and changes in the industry. If cooperatives have assumed greater responsibilities, they will represent more of the industry than non-members. And, in the final analysis, the Secretary of Agriculture makes the final decisions and issues the rules and regulations - cooperatives do not.

We, at Inter-State, do not believe the privilege of "bloc voting" should be changed for the following reasons:

At this time, it would be considered an attack on dairy cooperatives and would ignore other commodities;

It would surely defeat any chance for a promotion program for milk without any analysis of the issues;

It would increase the time and cost of referendum; and,

It would conflict with federal statutes which do allow cooperatives to exercise the "bloc vote" privilege.

In conclusion, let me say that if there is a question of whether or not cooperatives vote in the interest of their members, this is a fundemental issue which should be addressed in another forum.

I believe in the democratic process provided by the cooperative structure and law. In any case, where cooperatives do not "bloc vote" in the interest of their members, the remedy is for the members to chance directors through the democratically provided electoral process. Cooperatives which do not follow such procedures automatically would not be qualified under State and Federal laws and would lose the cooperative privilege to "bloc vote."

If there is something wrong with "bloc voting," then there is something wrong with the entire structure of business and government. I do not hold such a view. Cooperatives are an ideal democratic structure and best represent farmers in the business world. The "bloc vote" is one of our important tools.

Inter-State Milk Producers' Cooperative has also been in contact with President Alpehus Ruth of Lehigh Valley Farmers on the subject of "bloc voting". Mr. Ruth asked, on behalf of Lehigh Valley Farmers, that his cooperative's support for Inter-State's statement be made a matter of record.

N. Tier Dairy Co-op

I am William Sturges, a dairy farmer and president of the Northern Tier Milk Producers Cooperative of Wellsboro. I'd like to testify on House Bill 767. Before I do, let me explain some of the problems facing dairymen in Tioga County.

A group of dairymen, including myself, had an honest concern with the way major cooperatives were handling producers. As the size of a cooperative structure grows, the less control producers seem to have.

A number of us were tired of repeated assessments by the major co-ops, and the lack of control that the farmer really has. So, we formed our own cooperative and recently received our Articles of Association. Ours is a small but growing organization. We feel we have made a step in the right direction. We hope to offer the dairymen of Central Pennsylvania an alternative market.

We as a group have dedicated ourselves to remain farmer controlled. So that means we as a group will not block vote for referendums. I'm not here today to run down major cooperatives. The major cooperatives have done an effective job in helping to provide a stable market for dairymen in Pennsylvania.

I'm not here to testify against cooperatives. I'm here today to testify against block voting. It is one practice done by dairy cooperatives that I have found very objectionable.

First of all, the Board of Directors of a cooperative decides which way to cast its block vote. Since most of the co-op's in Pennsylvania enroll members from out of state, some of the directors on co-op boards are residents of other states.

These directors have the power to decide if dairymen in Pennsylvania would or should be required to contribute to a marketing progoram. It's like the voters of Canada deciding that the people in the United States must pay more taxes.

Should block voting not be permitted in the Commonwealth, as House Bill 767 seeks to accomplish, then a New York farmer who's on the board of a Pennsylvania cooperative would not dictate whether I must contribute to an advertising program.

Another reason that block voting is harmful is apathy. If a producer disagrees with his cooperative's decision, he may feel that his vote is not important.

It's true that his vote is deducted from the overall co-op block total. but so many farmers don't even bother to cast ballots when a co-op block votes. They feel if the co-op throws their 2,000 votes for a referendum, his one vote "against" won't change the outcome - so why even bother.

Many board members have said that block voting is vital, and good for the cooperative structure. In some cases, these same board members have not properly polled its membership to determine their position. After all, it's the members who will pay for the program in the end.

I'm happy to see legislation introduced in the General Assembly that would eliminate cooperative block voting. I'd like to commend Representative David Wright and the 15 other co-sponsors of the proposal. Some co-ops may not agree with this legislation, but the farmers do. And it's the farmers whose interest this committee ought to protect.

For these reasons, I urge this committee to fully support House Bill 767.

'Block Vote' Bill

Milk Marketing, Inc.

I have been asked by Milk Marketing, Inc. General Manager Gordon Riehl, to make a policy statement for Milk Marketing, Inc regarding HB767, which would amend the present Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968.

Milk Marketing, Inc. is a full service dairy marketing cooperative operating in parts of eight states. Membership consists of 9,200 dairy farmers, of which 1,200 are in Pennsylvania. Milk Marketing, Inc. represents its members in various legislative efforts in response to policies established by the Board of Directors and Delegates.

One of the predecessor cooperatives of Milk Marketing, Inc., together with other cooperatives, general farm organizations, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and many legislators, spent much time, thought and effort to develop the present act. It has worked well for several commodities. Producers of Agricultural Commodities should continue to have the opportunity to avail themselves of the potential increase in sales of their products that will result from an accelerated promotion effort.

Milk Marketing, Inc opposes HB767 because we feel the present act satisfactorily addresses the proposed amendments. Some of the amendments would unnecessarily add to the administrative expense.

Specifically, now to the issues raised in HB767:

Voting — The present act assures any individual the right to his individual vote. However, many farmers who have formed and supported cooperatives expect their elected representatives to address and take action on issues, in their behalf. This is in keeping with our representative form of government. The proposed revision in HB 767 would deny these producers this right.

Termination — Request for termination should not be limited to 10-15 percent, due to the potential for minority rule and harassment. The present act adequately covers the right to petition and assures producer control.

Majority Rule — The isue of majority rule is addressed in the present act and provides for adequate assurance of a majority, since the majority must also represent the majority of the commodity in question. Requiring a larger majority would hamper the democratic process and greatly impede implementation of programs.

Review — the 5-year review provision in the present act is necessary to provide adequate time to implement and test the performance of a promotion program. To change consumer buying patterns requires commitment to definite programs and materials. A 3-year review would prevent long range planning and purchasing and thus decrease the efficiency of programs. Further, more frequent reviews add greatly to the administrative expense.

Milk Marketing, Inc. feels the present act resulting from the combined study of many cooperatives, general farm organizations, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture and Legislators, is adequate.

Kent Shelhamer

My name is Kent Shelhamer, and I am from Berwick, Pennsylvania I am a self employed farmer now, and have been a farmer continually since 1950.

This committee now has before it a proposal dealing with certain individual's right to vote or their right not to vote for an issue, and that also is important in our democratic process.

House Bill 767 brings to light a very complicated and intricate issue It is one that many people who have engaged in agriculture all their lives do not understand. For instance, although there are over 100 agricultural cooperatives registered to do business in Pennsylvania, only a few would be affected by block voting.

While its application is basically to agricultural co-ops, it is not an amendment to the co-op law

Its application can be to all commodities now grown in Pennsylvania, but presently only covers a few .milk, apples, cherries, and potatoes.

While there are four commodities presently covered, only milk cooperatives exercise the block voting principle as far as I know.

It does point out a glaring deficiency that exists between farmers For instance:

Two dairy farmers can live along side of each other. An issue can be raised by the Secretary of Agriculture, as to whether a self imposed tax sould be levied on producers of milk.

One farmer can be selling his milk to an independent milk dealer. He will have the right to express himself any way he wants. To vote "Yes" for taxing his industry, to vote "No" against the tax, or if he isn't sure, or may feel intimidated, to not vote at all. And by not voting, under section 5 (B) of the present Pennsylvania law which requires a majority by number, and a majority by volume, he is effectively casting a "no" vote.

Now let us take the plight of the poor cooperative member. He may be for the issue. If so, fine. But if he is not for the issue, he must receive a notice from his cooperative telling him how they officially stand on the issue. The cooperative will also inform him of his right to vote agains their wishes.

But few, if any, dairy producers with a surplus of milk, will publicly go against their cooperative. He is many times intimidated into doing nothing, and under present law a handful of men (the directors) decide how his vote will be cast...so, in this case a "no" vote is a "yes" vote.

The right to be intimidated in our voting procedure has long been an accepted standard in this country. Yet this relic from the Renaissance period has reared it's head since 1922.

'Block Vote' Bill

"blockvoting" will sometimes try to pass the procedure off with respectability by saying it is just the way your representatives work in Harrisburg. That is, our directors (elected representatives) are only voting for their members like you do at the state capital.

Anyone who tries to sell this cheap shot, either doesn't know how government works with it's system of checks and balances, or is just trying to confuse the issue because that's not how our state government works Our constitution sets safe guards as to how many votes it takes to carry an issue. It's not just a majority of those voting, but a constitutional majority.

There is a big difference, as any member of the House well knows If you choose not to vote, your vote is recorded in the negative, and no one, not your country chairman, not your state chairman, no not even your floor leader himself has the right to vote for you

How did this miscarriage of justice come about' (block voting).

Power brokers in Washington when Capper-Volstead Act was passed in 1922 were able to insert the philosophy that when a producers joings a cooperative he loses his right to individually decide some issues. In this case the block voting issue was important to one group only, the big milk cooperatives.

And why the big milk cooperatives?

Because, by being able to vote all the votes of their members or by block voting they had a better chance to succeed in obtaining marketing orders

Under these marketing orders the United States Government would then set the wholesale prices and subsidize milk. What this legislature does with H B. 767 will have no effect on federal law. So, contrary to some whole sale buyers of milk, national milk marketing orders are not decided by state statutes. So, that issue is mute.

What we are considering is, shall the Pennsylvania legislature allow this travesty to continue; where Pennsylvania commodities can tax their producers tor a program they may not be in agreement with.

Aside from block voting this amendment covers several other issues All are probably "OK" except one Section 6 would change, under this proposal from a majority by number and a majority by volume — to 2/3 voting

The volume part should be retained under H.B. 767. As it is its a safeguard and returns it to its original language.

To use 2/3 of those voting could be very misleading and weakens the act, should it be passed. Under this proposal a 2/3 vote could be had by only three people voting. Some minimums or constitutional volume should be included as present law requires.

With the amendments I have suggested, if this Bill is passed into law, all farmers in Pennsylvania will be treated equally for the first time since the "Pennsylvania Commodities Act" became law. The end result of a successful referendum under the Pennsylvania Commodity Act can have a substancial effect on prices all people pay. Its effect penetrates into every corner of our society

State Grange

My name is Feryl Treichler I am a dairy farmer from Berks County and am chairman of the Dairy Committee of the Pennsylvania State Grange

First, I would like to state that the Pennsylvania State Grange opposes the amendments to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act as recommended in House Hill 767 for three very basic reasons:

We are opposed to any crippling of the effectiveness of cooperative groups by prohibiting bloc voting on marketing order referendums.

We feel that efforts should be concentrated instead on providing adequate time for individuals to vote on marketing orders and encouraging individuals to vote.

We feel that an empty vote in place of a bloc vote will not provide any better producer representation on marketing programs.

To my knowledge, members of the board of directors governing cooperatives are voted into office by the members of the cooperative. Members are, in essence, electing these individuals to represent them in making policy decisions for the cooperative as a whole.

In fact, the bargaining power that is gained in banding together is one of the advantages of joining a cooperative in the first place. By joining such a group, a producer imparts some authority to the directors to speak for him.

We believe in independent, equal rights for voting on all issues by the individual and the State Grange has long urged its members to discharge their duties as citizens by voting in all elections and referendums.

As stated in the present Act, "The Secretary shall consider the vote of a cooperative association as the votes of such members, providing the cooperative has first notified its members, in writing, of its intention to cast a representative vote. Such notice shall inform the producer of his right to cast his vote individually and shall include thereon the following words in bold face type· "Warning - if you do not exercise your right to vote, your cooperative has the right to vote for you."

We feel that this is sufficient notification. Our concern is that notification is given to the individual as least four weeks in advance so that he has adequate time to make an intelligent decision.

We therefore urge that the ammendments as stated in House Bill 767 not be made to the present Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act. Instead, let efforts be concentrated on allowing sufficient notification time for referendums and on encouraging individuals to express their views by voting for themselves.

PDA

I, Deputy Secretary J. Luther Snyder, am here this morning representing Pennsylvania Agriculture Secretary Penrose Hallowell, to testify concerning the current Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968, and proposed amendments to the act included in House Bill 767

We believe that the existing law has been working satisfactorily, not only in terms of procedures for creation of marketing programs and reviews of programs, but also in terms of the benefits provided to the producers who are included in the three current marketing programs

The amendments to the act included in HB 767 appear to accomplish the end of insuring individual balloting, but in fact, the existing law also makes provisions which guarantee individual voting rights

The current act provides that a simple majority by number of producers and by volume is needed to pass a proposed program HB 767 would amend the Marketing act to require a two-thirds majority for passage We believe that any amendment which would provide other than a simple

Guernsey breeders gather

Romella Farm host field day

Former president of Lancaster County Guernsey Breeders, Peter Witmer, Willow Street, captures the overall judging honor with a high score of 145.

Third-high scorer in the judging contest, Thelma Garber, Willow Street, correctly places a class. She and husband Kenneth milk 55 Guernseys at their dairy, Willows Farm.

BY DONNA TOMMELLEO

STRASBURG — More than 120 Guernsey enthusiasts gathered at Robert and Melvin Breneman's Romella Farm near Strasburg on Tuesday for the annual Lancaster County Guernsey Breeder Field Day.

Like many present day farms, the Brenemans expanded in 1970, from a stall barn operation to a free-stall with an accompanying double-six milking parlor.

However, the 165-head registered Guernsey dairy is also flavored with a bit of the past. The Breneman homestead was built in 1815. Overlooking the modern free-stall and parlor, a stone barn, erected in 1790, rests on a hillside.

Meanwhile, the Brenemans employ progressive dairying practices such as group feeding and a total-mixed ration.

Herdsman Don Breneman explained the 165-head herd is divided into three production groups, high, low and near dry.

Twice daily, a mixer wagon loaded with haylage, corn silage, high moisture corn and a 26 percent concentrate churns and grinds its way down the long free-stall center alley to feed the Breneman herd.

In addition, the herd receives much of the 10,000 bales of hay made at Romella Farm during the year.

The on-the-farm semen tank contains a variety of bulls but Minnie's Choice, Atlantic and Jupiter get the most use said Breneman, who along with co-herdsman Joe Witmer, Strasburg, are responsible for artificial breedings.

Two people handle the 3½ hour chore of milking which begins at 3:30 a.m. while most folks toss and turn and begin another dream. The afternoon milking begins about 11 hours later.

Although merchandising cattle is not heavily practiced on this Strasburg farm, about eight Romella animals have been sold in the past year.

"We're geared more toward getting good production," Breneman said.

Later in the day, the Brenemans and other Guernsey breeders got some advice from Field Day judge and former Guernsey breeder William Fredd, Quarryville, on obtaining top production.

Fredd urged the group to evaluate their feeding programs and provide quality forage. He stressed veterinarian use and

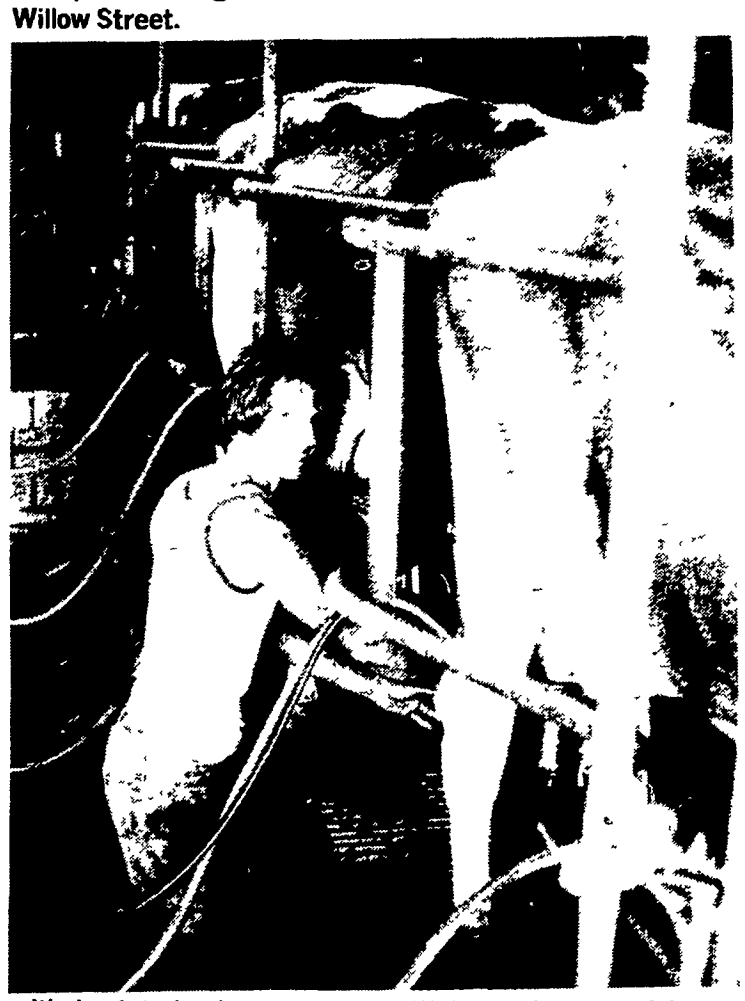
Before penciling in his choices, Kurt Breneman, 11, takes a long, hard look at the senior yearling exhibited by Brian Shimp, Strasburg. Kurt is the son of Art and Dot Breneman, Willow Street.



It's back to business, as usual. While field day participants bask under large shade trees and hear various guest speakers, Don Breneman is back at work for the afternoon milking.

Elmer Lapp, Kinzers, scrutinizes a class of 2-year-olds before making his decision at the Romella Farm, Strasburg. Although Lapp has a small herd of Guernseys, he is better known for his 40 years experience breeding Belgian horses and serves as Secretary and Treasurer of Pennsylvania's Horse and Mule Association.

Romella herdsman, Don Breneman coaxes an unwilling class member at the Guernsey field day on Tuesday, while field day participants evaluate the Romella 2-year-olds.

USDA establishes Med-fly regs

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Permanent federal regulations regarding the Mediterranean fruit fly in California's Alameda, San Mateo and Santa Clara counties were issued under the Plant Quarantine Act, Harvey L. Ford, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official, said.

Ford, deputy administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said this action makes permanent regulations which were issued on an emergency basis. Movement restriction, inspection and certification treatment requirements will still be enforced only in the three counties previously designated as regulated areas. Fruits and vegetables from the rest of the state will continue to move without restriction.

"When a major pest outbreak is discovered USDA normally issues emergency regulations regarding the infested area," Ford said. "This enables us to take immediate action to contain the pest, prevent further spread and bring the outbreak under control. If eradication cannot be achieved in a reasonably short period, public hearings are held and, if justified, the regulations are made permanent."

The emergency federal regulations were issued immediately following discovery of the Medfly outbreak in June, 1980. The regulations have been periodically expanded since then—most recently on July 14, when the three counties were brought entirely under regulation. The public hearing on establishing a permanent quarantine was held May 18 in San Francisco, Calif.

Ford said California also has the same three counties under state regulation.

emphasized the importance of a 12 month calving interval.

"Start that dairy calf well," he said. And once she's started and growing, he explained, don't put her out in the back pasture and forget about her.

The retired vo-ag teacher also stressed using a milking system and adhering to it. Lastly, but probably most importantly he advised the group to read and study to advance their information of the dairy industry.

County Agent Glenn Shirk commended the breeders for their quality product. His words were echoed by Lancaster County Dairy Princess Deb Greider and K.D. Linde, president of Lancaster County Guernsey Breeders.

Earlier in the day, field day participants tested their judging skills on three Guernsey classes, senior yearling, 2-year-olds and aged cows.

Men, women and youngsters scrutinized the Romella animals and penciled in choices. Some erased and switched animals while others stuck to their guns.

When the dust settled, four Willow Street breeders topped the competition. Peter Witmer had the high score of 145. Dot Breneman was right behind him with 144. Thelma Garber was a close third followed by John Rohrer, fourth. Quarryville's Joyce Wagner placed fifth in a field of about 100 contestants.

Following the judging competition, hungry appetites were appeased by a delicious lunch topped with cold Golden Guernsey milk. Beneath the large shade trees on the Romella lawn folks relaxed and enjoyed the fellowship of other Guernsey breeders.

With more than 40 years of judging experience behind him, Field Day judge, William Fredd, Quarryville, places the senior yearling class.

Guernsey fanciers dig into a hearty noonday meal which followed the judging contest. Cold cuts, rolls, vegetables and salads were all washed down with what else...a cold glass of Golden Guernsey milk provided by Romella Farm.

Lancaster bred cow brings $40,000

MOUNT JOY — Lancaster bred Elevation daughter, which originally sold for $10,000 three years ago, quadrupled her value this summer at a Wisconsin breeder's sale.

Shel-Mar Acres Elevation Eunice sold for $40,000 to Bill Price, El Paso, Texas. The 5-year-old cow, bred by Harold Shellenberger, Mount Joy, was third high-seller at the Willard Nehls Estate's Summer Hummer Sale in Columbus, Wisconsin this July

Shellenberger explained that two Wisconsin breeders, Dale Krantz and Willard Nehls have bought a number of cattle from Lancaster area farms in the past. The partners of Willard Nehls Estate, Juneau, Wis., purchased the Eunice cow as a fresh heifer from Shellenberger. Krantz and Nehls also purchased her dam Shel-Mar Acres Bootmaker Satin, a Very Good-87

The Eunice cow's latest record includes 22,201 lbs. of milk with 867 lbs. fat and a 3 9 percent test. She was one of 55 dairy animals in the Summer Hummer Sale which averaged $10,000 referendum on the program to determine whether or not it should be continued.

Of these changes, the one causing most of the commotion is the elimination of block voting by a cooperative — presently a co-op can vote for its members if individual farmers choose not to cast their ballots. Testifying against HB 767 were representatives of the major milk cooperatives, including Milk Marketing, Inc., Inter-State, Lehigh Valley, and NEDCO. The other cooperative coming out in opposition of HB 767 is the Pa. Cooperative Potato Growers, Inc.

Also testifying against HB 767 was Deputy Secretary of Agriculture Luther Snyder, representing the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture. He stated the Department's feelings and said "the present procedure is adequate to carry out a marketing program." The present law allows block voting and requires a majority of the individuals voting and 50 percent of the volume for passage.

Snyder remarked that changing the length of time from five to three years would increase costs of a marketing program for the farmer — the present system allows the Secretary of Agriculture to see whether a marketing program is effective during the period of appointment.

The Pennsylvania Farmers' Association and the State Grange also went on record opposing HB 767, stating they were satisified with the present system.

When questioned about why non-co-op farmers don't vote on referendums, Mervin Myers, a dairyman representing PFA, stated "apathy." He added that having concise information presented to the farmer concerning the referendum might help "if they (farmers) bother to read the information provided, and if they don't throw it in the waste can."

Although not presently affected by a state marketing program, the subject of the milk referendum kept raising its head during the hearing. Previously, two milk referendums have been voted down by the state's dairy producers (of whom 80 percent are represented by milk cooperatives, it was said) even though block voting was in effect during the balloting.

Support for HB 767 came from the Pennsylvania Farmers' Union, former Pennsylvania Secretary of Agriculture Kent Shelhamer, and a Franklin County dairy farmer, Barbara Woods.

PFU's Carl Kaufman remarked that the block voting system is "one step removed from dictatorship." He commented PFU is for preserving the family farm and the American way — one person, one vote. He referred to results of the 1973 milk referendum which showed that cooperative's block votes were cast exactly opposite those individually cast by dairy farmers.

Shelhamer echoed Kaufman's sentiments saying, "I don't believe if Pennsylvania farmers understood block voting that it would be the policy of PFA or the Grange to support it.

Others who sent letters to Chairman Grieco's office in support of HB 767 included: Robert Hoyer, Easton; Valley Haven Farms, Howard Pysher and Sons, Bangor; Margaret Edwards, Oxford; Lester Loch, Kempton; Karen Watson, Columbia Cross Roads; Fred Baker, Meshoppen; Beverly Watson, Columbia Cross Roads; Connie Teel, Meshoppen; Kenneth Arthur, Hughesville; Rev. Sam Reed, Avis; Hanna Fenstermacher, Lairdsville; Verus Shaner, Hughesville; Kenneth Miller, Bangor; and Jack Philson, chairman, Pa. Farmers Union.

majority for passage could insure rule by a minority.

The three existing boards under this act, the Apple Marketing Board, the Red Cherry Marketing Board, and the Potato Research Board, are all opposed to a provision which would change the formula to require a two-thirds majority for passage

The current act also provides for termination or suspension of marketing programs under the act when requested in writing by one-third of affected producers who market more than fifty percent of the volume of commodities produced under the program.

Amendments in HB 767 would eliminate this provision, which is, effectively a means of review. This language was put into the act to allow suspension of a marketing program under extreme circumstances, and has the same effect as a review referendum

Under the current act, the Secretary of Agriculture must call a review referendum of affected producers every five years, to determine whether or not the marketing program will continue The amendments to the act included in HB 767 would change the five-year review period to a three-year period.

The Apple and Red Cherry Marketing Boards and the Potato Research Board are in opposition to this proposed amendment, in light of the additional costs of holding the review referendums. Existing language in section seven concerning suspension or termination of a program would cover the contingency that a program would lose the support of its affected producers within the five-year period prior to a review referendum.

The Department of Agriculture is satisfied with the programs now supported by the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968, and is convinced that the existing law is working satisfactorily. We respectfully recommend that the existing law continue to function as is

Pa. Potato Growers

On July 22, 1981, the Board of Directors of Pennsylvania Co-operative Potato Growers, Inc. voted unanimously to oppose any change to the Pennsylvania Agricultural Commodities Marketing Act of 1968.

The Pennsylvania Co-operative Potato Growers represents the majority of the potato growers in our state and is the only state organization representing the potato grower. The Pennsylvania Co-operative Potato Growers is opposed to House Bill 767 and the amendments it proposes.

We support the concept of modified bloc voting by co-operatives. We believe that removing this provision would make passage of referendums for the purpose of sales promotion, research and service programs unnecessarily difficult.

Lebanon Holstein breeders

was the second dairyman to have freestalls and loose housing — since 1954.

Bomgardner's herd, from predominantly Rag Apple bloodlines, has a rolling average of 15,800 pounds milk and 596 pounds fat. Their daily production is shipped to Wengerts, Lebanon.

When Harvey started on his own in the dairy business in 1947, he owned 10 registered cows. "It took until two years ago to ever get a Junior All-American," he says, recounting how his son Dave's heifer, Mil-Harv Ivan Thunder, won the honors in 1979 at Madison, Wisconsin. "We haven't had an excellent cow yet, but maybe someday," he adds optimistically.

Although they may not wear the EX classification code in their names, the cattle that paraded before the dairy producers' critical eyes were excellent Holsteins, from the 'dew' on their noses to the swish of their tails Official judge for the evening's contest was William Pettit of Huff 'N Puff Farms in New Jersey.

Pettit serves as a national director to the Holstein Association, along with operating a 100-plus cow herd. There are currently 135 milking cows plus young stock, making the number of cattle on the farm total about 300 head.

Pettit told the group his operation is involved in embryo transfers, and startled them with a statistic on the largest number of embryos he flushed from one cow — 84 embryos resulting in 60 pregnancies. Pettit has been involved with the registered Holstein business since 1958 when he began attending the New England planning meetings. He later became president of the New Jersey board, and was elected national director in 1978.

Pettit filled the dairy producers in on the current status and historic growth of the Holstein Association, and discussed some of the latest innovations in the business of breeding cattle, including frozen embryos and exporting.

He announced there might be a change from descriptive classification to linear classification within the next year. Also, gold medal dams will be more closely related to computers and percentages by next July. And, finally, he reported that cow indexes for type, similar to indexes for production, "are in the wind."

Pettit closed by recounting the recent blow to the dairy industry dealt by Borden when they announced their switch to imitation cheeses, putting six Wisconsin cheese plants into tailspins — taking $170 million away from Wisconsin dairy farmers.

"We need to do a whale of a job promoting our product," he says in summation. "We're missing the boat somewhere."

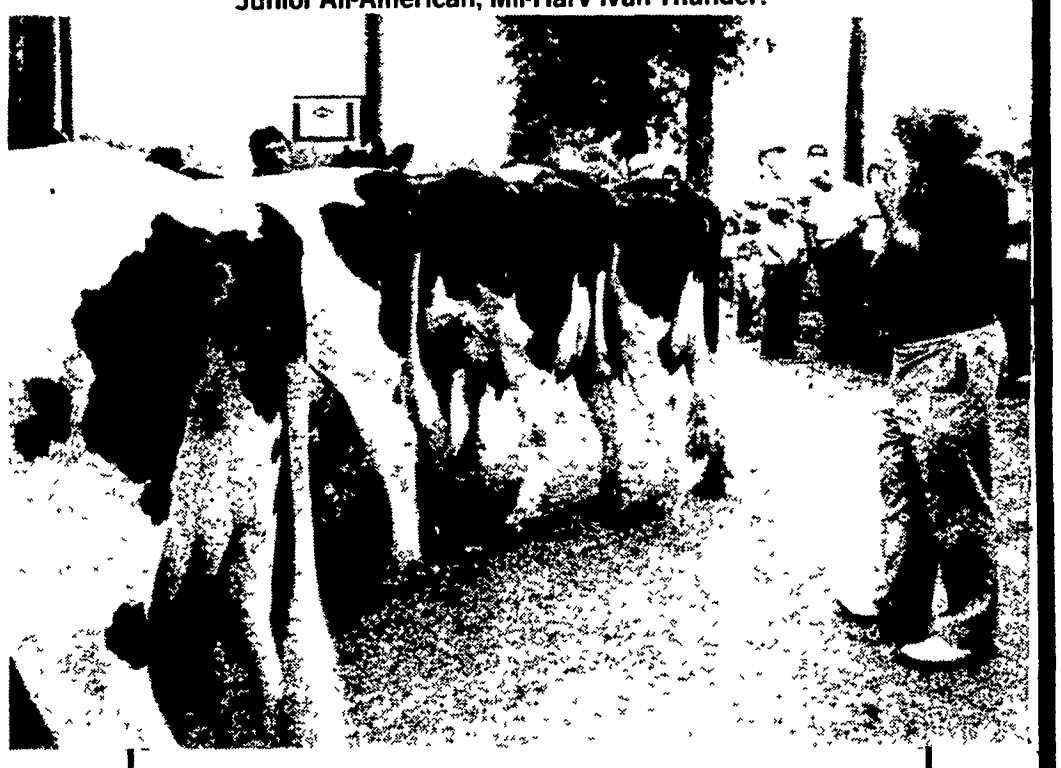
Harvey and Mildred Bomgardner have been in the dairy business since 1947. This is the second time they have hosted the county's Holstein field day. Harvey, gives a lot of credit to his assistants on the farm, son Dave, at halter of heifer Mil-Harv Majesty Sleek, Mark, and Jane.

Holstein breeders warmed up their judging eyes with this first class of 3-year-olds out of the Harvey T. Bomgardner herd. All four of the cows were paternal sisters to Mil-Harv farm's Junior All-American, Mil-Harv Ivan Thunder.



Official judge William Pettit, from Huff 'N Puff Farms, New Jersey, agreed with some of the Holstein breeders on placing the classes. Pettit has been a national director to the Holstein Association since 1978.

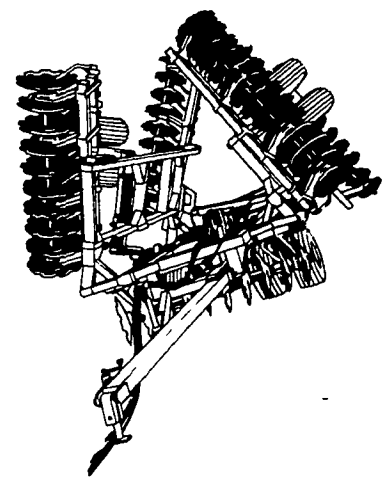
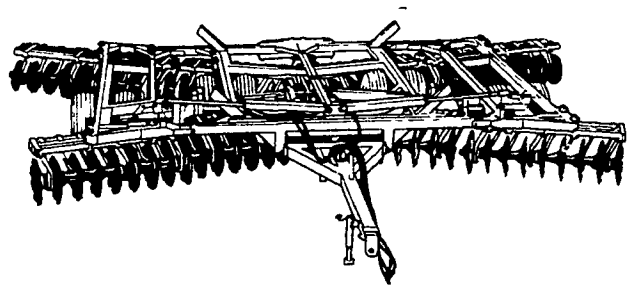
Notched or plain blades are available on all tandem models All offset models are available with notched blades. Some offset models offer a choice of notched or plain blades Rear seotions on both tandem and offset models feature a stepped-down blade configuration for optimum soil leveling action



Rugged hitch is interconnected to the hydraulic leveling system This pivoting action allows the unit to remain level in both the field and transport position

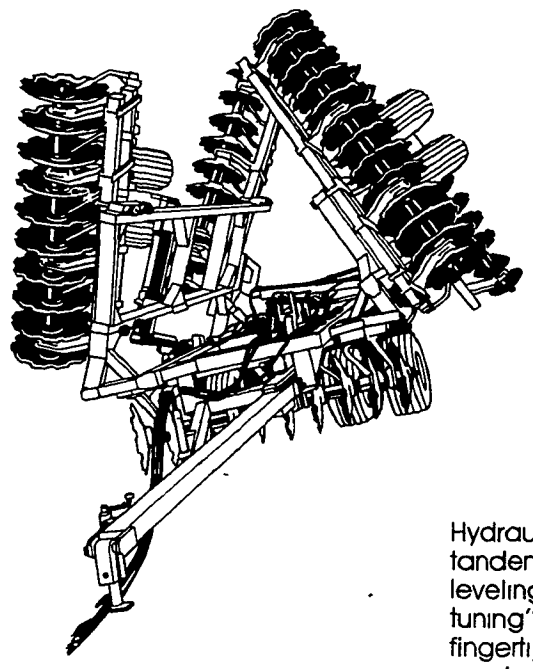
The tandem models feature a center mounted, self-cleaning knife to break the center ridge for complete soil-leveling action

Gang sections are held to the main frame with a rugged double-pin clamping system. Gang angles are adjustable to provide optimum performance in a variety of conditions — from primary tillage to final seedbed preparation



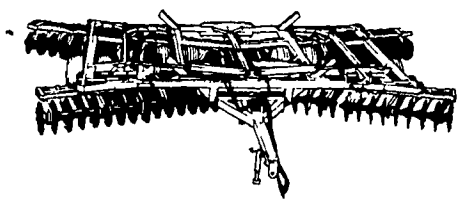
Positive depth control is incorporated into the hydraulic axle control to assure uniform cutting depth. It eliminates the guesswork, and the adjustment is easy

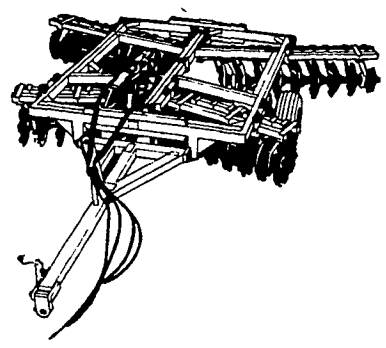
SEE YOUR LOCAL SPERRY NEW HOLLAND DEALER. HE IS READY TO BREAK NEW GROUND!



Triple-sealed bearings, which can be lubricated, supported by cast steel bearing housings, are standard equipment on all offset and tandem units Fabricated steel spacing and bearing spools, standard on offset models, provide added strength Guards on the bottom of bearing brackets provide added protection from dirt and wear

Hydraulic leveling control, on both offset and tandem models, provides total control of the leveling action Because it's hydraulic, "fine tuning" of the front and rear gangs is done with fingertip control from the tractor seat no cranks or wrenches to turn





Shafts are durable and provide long, trouble-free service On the OD 100, OD 200, TD 100 and TD 200 models, 1¾" high strength, cold drawn steel shafts are standard The OD 300 features a 2" cold drawn, heat-treated shaft for increased strength and durability

Beam's hogs 'fight' way to Berks championship

BY DICK ANGLESTEIN

LEESPORT — Nelson Beam's entries literally took on all comers at the Berks County FFA Market Hog Show on Wednesday

And in more ways than one

First of all, the 18-year-old Twin Valley graduate's entries took both the grand and reserve championships among the 94 hogs in the show

Also, when they were in the ring at the Leesport Auction, extra personnel were kept busy with the boards, whips and canes separating them from other hogs

When judge Rod Gilbert, livestock superintendent at Delaware Valley College, picked Beam's 225-pound Duroc-X as the grand champion, he made mention that "it wasn't just because it's a good fighter "

"It's the kind of market hog that we're looking for today and will hang up well on the rail," he explained

But each time the red hog nipped an ear and another squeal erupted, it caught the attention of everyone at ringside

The reserve grand champion, also shown by Beam, who is in his first year in animal production studies at the Berks Campus of Penn State, was a purebred Yorkshire

At the evening sale, both the two top entries were bought by Hatfield Packing Beam ended up with $1602 00 to put toward his studies

The grand champion brought $4 30 a pound and the reserve $2 70 a pound The grand came out of the 225-pound class and the reserve out of the 235-pound category

In all, the 94 head tipped the scales at 19,913 pounds and brought the youthful exhibitors a total of $11,890.91. Average price including the champ was 60 cents a pound

It was a repeat performance for Beam at the countywide show, which also had entries from Northern Lebanon and Blue Mountain high schools He took the grand championship last year when he showed for the first time He is the son of Omar and Ruth Beam, of R2 Elverson

Actually, the battles his hogs were staging in the ring were with entries of a neighbor. The competing hogs had been penned side-by-side the night before the show

Beam explained he did something a bit different this year

"Last year, I had to hold the hogs back," he explained

"But this year, I had younger ones and really pushed them toward the end And about a week before the show, I started walking them "

Beam also took the runnerup spot in senior showmanship and third in the fitting

The senior showmanship champion was Scott Stoltzfus, of Twin Valley, and the fitting champ was Marjorie Faust

In the junior category, Rod Stoltzfus, also of Twin Valley, won the fitting and Charles Seidel, of Hamburg took the junior showmanship

Class placings in the show include:

Junior Fitting

1 Rod Stoltzfus Twin Valley 2 Troy Adam Kutztown 3 Mark Rohrbach Hamburg 4 Pauline Noss Conrad Weiser 5 Bruce Light Northern Lebanon

Junior Showing

(Turn to Page A37)

A double-barrled winner, Nelson Beam, of Twin Valley, is shown with both the grand champion and the reserve grand champion of the Berks County FFA Market Hog Show. The Duroc-X grand champ came out of the 225-pound class and the Yorkshire reserve was from the 230-pound class. Beam was also last year's top winner.

Senior champions include Marjorie Faust, of Kutztown, in fitting contest and Scott Stoltzfus, of Twin Valley, in showing.

It's not easy being a little guy in a big ring with big pigs

Four-year-old Jason Wisser was the most "future" of the participants in the Berks County FFA Market Hog Show on Wednesday.

He was in the ring several times with cane in hand, including the super heavyweight class, in which the hogs outweighed him by more than five times. But he stuck right in there despite being dwarfed by the other exhibitors and just about being able to look out over the backs of some of the hogs.

With this head start, Jason, son of Mr. and Mrs. Larry Wisser, of New Tripoli, is sure to be a top showman and exhibitor when he reaches FFA age.

The suggested captions are just our version of what might have been going through his youthful mind during the show.

Now, let's see, which one of these is mine?

If you can do better you get in here -

Wow, now she's hiding behind the post

C'mon do your stuff. Here comes da judge.

MILK MARKET NEWS

FEDERAL ORDER NO. 2 NEW YORK — NEW JERSEY

June price remains $12.83

Producers who delivered milk during June 1981 to handlers were paid on the basis of $12.83 per cwt., unchanged from the previous month and 91 cents higher than June 1980's uniform price.

According to a recent Order No. 2 market bulletin, a total of 964.6 million pounds, an increase of 23.3 million pounds from last year, was received from 17,512 producers.

Although Class I usage was up almost 4 millions pounds to 358.5 million pounds, the utilization percentage was only 37.2, 0.5 points below June 1980.

June was the last takeout month of 1981's seasonal incentive plan. A total of $3,858,328.70 was removed, bringing this year's total to $12,829,421.28, an increase of $459,227.26 from 1980. This money, plus the interest earned, will be returned in the August through November pools.

FEDERAL ORDER NO. 4 MIDDLE ATLANTIC

Base price drops two cents

The June 1981 base milk price was $13.89 per cwt. and the excess milk price $12.37.

The weighted average price was $13.86 per cwt., and butterfat differential for the month was 17 cents.

The base milk declined two cents from May while the weighted average was up three cents. The gross value of pooled milk was $68.0 million in June compared to $59.9 million a year ago.

A recent Order No. 4 bulletin reports that producer receipts totaled 491.8 million pounds during June, a sharp drop of 5.6 percent from May, on a daily basis. Milk production this June was up over 29 million pounds or 6.3 percent from a year ago. Class I producer milk totaled 223.6 million pounds and accounted for 45.47 percent of total receipts.

A year ago, Class I producer milk totaled 219.2 millions pounds and 47.39 percent of total receipts. Base milk accounted for 89.36 percent ot total monthly production. There were 7,497 producers supplying pool handlers during the month, an increase of 171 from last June.

The average daily delivery per producer was 2,187 pounds in June, a drop of 136 pounds from May, but 82 pounds or 3.9 percent above last year.

Middle Atlantic order pool handlers reported Class I in-area milk disposition on 190.0 million pounds during June, a drop of 1.9 percent from a year earlier, after adjustment to eliminate variation due to calendar composition.

New base period begins August 1

The Order No. 4 base-excess plan provides that each producer establish a new base each year.

The 5-month period of August through December is the base-forming period, and this base is effective for the following 12-month period of March through February inclusive.

Bases established during August-December 1981 will be used in determining each producer's base and excess milk deliveries during the period March 1982 through February 1983.

Bases are computed and announced no later than February 25 each year. The base is calculated by dividing the total pounds of milk a producer delivers to pool handlers during the August-December period by the number of production days.

The minimum number of days used in computing bases is 120. A producer who fails to deliver milk during the base-forming period at least on a 120 days basis, has his base computed as though deliveries made represented 120 days' production.

New producers entering the market who made no qualifying milk deliveries during the base-forming period, or, producers who wish to relinquish their established bases (by written notification to the Market Administrator) shall have a base reflecting a percentage of their deliveries.

August Class I price decreases

The Order No. 4 Class I milk price for August 1981 is $15.37 per cwt. for milk testing 3.5 percent butterfat. This price is down two cents from July and is 91 cents higher than last August's Class I price.

The $15.37 price is based on the June 1981 Minnesota-Wisconsin manufacturing milk price of $12.59 per cwt., adjusted to a 3.5 percent butterfat content, plus a $2.78 Class I differential.

CCC corn sales total 221,814 bushels

WASHINGTON, D.C. — The Commodity Credit Corporation accepted seven bids last week on a total of 221,814 bushels of corn offered from the 199 million bushels in CCC's uncommitted inventory, according to Everett Rank, CCC Executive Vice President. Three hundred seventy-six bids were rejected on a total of 33,377,742 bushels, he said.

Most of his corn was purchased by CCC as a result of the 1980 Soviet grain embargo.

The average price received was $3.60 per bushel (basis #2 yellow corn). This price is above the national average minimum sales price of $3.13 per bushel.

Tax Act profits farmers

covers large trucks, machinery including farm tractors, and one-purpose agricultural buildings.

Under the three-year category will fall highway tractors, light-duty trucks, breeding animals and machinery and equipment used for development.

For individuals, Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and Co., points out that, "The primary immediate benefits will have an across the board tax rate reduction phased in over a four-year period and a one-step reduction in the maximum individual tax rate from 70 to 50 percent."

The firm goes on to say that the reduction of the maximum tax bracket from 70 percent to 50 percent as of January 1, 1982 will be of primary benefit to individuals with significant amounts of interest and dividend income.

"What this does," explains Hoffman, "is to eliminate the distinction between personal service income (wages, salaries, professional fees) and passive or investment income. Since there was a 50 percent tax lid on personal service income, tax payers whose income consists mainly of salary or professional fees benefit the least from this change. By contrast, however, the top bracket reduction is bound to make a lot of pure investment situations more attractive and to take the steam out of a good many tax shelter deals."

A booklet released by Peat Marwick points out that the maximum long term capital gains rate for individuals is reduced from 28 to 20 percent.

"This should result," Hoffman said, "in an increase in individual investment activities which of course, is one of the principle goals of the revision of the tax law."

With new 4th Day™ your calves need fewer treatment days for scours.

Meet the newest member of the Wayne® Feeds family of dairy products: 4th Day, the high-fat, medicated milk replacer.

Like its name suggests, 4th Day is fed to calves as soon as they're off colostrum. With 20% fat, 20% protein, and the effective antibiotics neomycin and oxytetracycline, 4th Day gives calves the nutrition and medication they need for a strong, healthy start—including fewer scours.

In fact, Wayne research has shown that for their first five weeks, calves fed 4th Day can require up to 23% fewer treatment days for scours.

4th Day is easier to mix, too. A new manufacturing process lets it dissolve more quickly and completely, and stay in suspension longer. That means calves get a more consistent blend that won't settle out easily.

Get on the Wayne Feeds dairy program and get more out of your cows.

The Wayne Feeds calf program has many fine products to take a calf from birth to four months of age. The Wayne dairy feed management system is designed to get a heifer calving at 24 months—because the sooner she's fresh and milking, the more profitable it can be for you.

So get on the Wayne Feeds dairy program, starting with new 4th Day. See your Wayne Feeds representative today, and learn how we can treat you and your cows better.

Chemical association speaks out on export process

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Leaders of the agricultural chemicals industry told Congress recently that export notification requirements for unregistered pesticides could be best carried out by transmitting notices directly to regulatory officials of importing countries.

Jack D. Early, president of the National Agricultural Chemicals Association, and Nicholas L. Reding, of Monsanto Company and chairman of NACA's Board of Directors, also recommended that notification requirements be confined only to pesticides which contain an unregistered active ingredient or for which there is no registered formulation.

"The current system is burdensome and time-consuming," Early told members of the House Agriculture Subcommittee on Department Operations, Research and Foreign Agriculture during oversight hearings on the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rodenticide Act

He and Reding said the NACA proposal would ensure notifications are put in the hands of appropriate officials in foreign countries who would know how to deal with the information. In addition, they said the recommendation would eliminate the "serious negative effects" for U.S. exporters of requiring that they secure a written statement from their overseas customers while non-U.S. suppliers make no similar requests.

Under the present law, exporters are required to submit a signed acknowledgement letter from the foreign consumer to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for transmittal to the importing country. The law also requires that EPA notify foreign governments through the U.S. Department of State of the cancellation or suspension of a pesticide registration.

NACA is a non-profit, Washington-based trade association whose 115 members make or formulate virtually all the crop protection chemicals used in the United States and a large percentage used abroad.

Semen book available

WATERTOWN, WI. — The Semen Mart of Watertown, WI. has introduced a new inventory record book for frozen bull semen. The 3 3/4" by 5 1/4" loose-leaf binder fits well in a shirt pocket or desk drawer and eliminates the charts that usually hang in a dark and dirty part of the barn.

Each page of the miniature book provides records for one cane or rack of up to ten units of semen, its location in the storage tank, and the date of breeding and identification of the cow on which each unit is used.

The vinyl covered book retails for $7.95 and additional loose-leaf sheets are available For additional information, contact The Semen Mart, Box 354, Watertown, WI. 53094.

IH displays ag history at Smithsonian

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Lancaster County is well represented in a special agricultural exhibit at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History in the nation's capital.

The exhibit, sponsored by International Harvester, features a comparison of historical farm machines that permanently altered the course of agriculture and their present-day modern counterparts.

The exhibit uses large photographic dioramas of modern-day technology in each of the four seasons. These photo murals form a backdrop for the early machines.

The exhibit is open until November 1.

Among Lancaster County's contribution:

The large photo, which provides the backdrop for the first reaper, shows an IH Axial-Flow combine harvesting Lancaster County wheat. The modern machine is owned by Ken Zurin, custom combiner, of R3, Mt. Joy. The large red and black combine is shown at work on the Hiram Strickler farm at R3, Mt. Joy, which is worked by Floyd Kreider.

The photo, taken last harvest season, was arranged through local IH dealer, C.B. Hoober Son, Inc., of Intercourse.

Other Lancaster County contributions to the exhibit include a Huber steam traction engine, which was donated to the Smithsonian in 1973 by the A.F. Brandt family, of Bainbridge.

And another is an engineering drawing of a Landis Eclipse thresher, which was designed by a pair of Lancaster County brothers.

The exhibit also commemorates IH's 150th anniversary and the dramatic progress of American agriculture since the first mechanical reaper took to a grain field in 1831.

Prominent is the world's first successful mechanical reaper, invented by Cyrus H. McCormick in 1831 His invention brought mechanization to farming and marked the beginning of International Harvester, today a worldwide producer of agricultural equipment, trucks and construction machinery.

Before McCormick's invention farmers harvested grain by hand using a cradle to cut about two acres per day. U S. farmers were only able to produce enough food to feed four people.

The McCormick reaper increased the harvest to eight acres a day. Today's modern cousin illustrated in the exhibit, the IH Axial-Flow rotary combine harvests 100 acres of wheat, or 50 acres of corn, per day. This enables the American farmer to produce enough food for 68 people, including 20 overseas citizens.

Other displays in the exhibit show improvements in plowing and planting efficiency, the changing farm tractor that replaced the horse in the early 1900's, and old and new cotton pickers. A final section contrasts the dog-powered churn of an 1881 dairy operation with equipment in a modern day factory.

Herr honored

HOLTWOOD — Paul Herr, of Holtwood, an ABS representative for the past 23 years, has received from the National Association of Artificial Breeders (NAAB) an award of great merit.

He was recently honored with a certificate for 35,000 recorded first services. To date, Herr has over 44,000 recorded first services, which means he would have bred over 5 cows every day since 1958.

Livestock merchandising

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — A session-by-session summary of Livestock Marketing Congress '81 is now available free of charge from Livestock Merchandising Institute.

Single copies of the 13-page, magazine style "Special Report" can be obtained by writing the Institute, 4900 Oak Street, Kansas City, Mo., 64112.

This year's Congress, held in Minneapolis, had as its theme "Competing For The Protein Dollar." Nearly 30 speakers and panelists explored the growing challenge to the livestock and red meat industry from competing protein sources.

Congress program sessions looked at "Our Customer," "Our Competitors," and "Our Challenge." The Report also includes a summary of the script of the opening audiovisual presentation, which subsequently has been shown before a number of industry groups.

Participants in the Congress included Walter Heller, former economic advisor to three presidents; W. Wayne Talarzyk, professor of marketing and consumer lifestyle specialist from Ohio State University; consumer advocate Ralph Nader, and leading spokesman from virtually every sector of the livestock and meat industries.

Conducted since 1970 by the Institute, the annual Congress has emerged as the industry's leading conference on livestock economics.

Small meat and poultry processors

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Small meat and poultry processing plants who want to participate in the U.S. Department of Agriculture's quality control inspection system can receive guidance from a new USDA publication.

"Quality Control in Small Plants — A Guide For Meat and Poultry Processors" provides information on the concept of quality control and how it relates to the USDA inspection program.

The publication discusses quality control in the entire plant operation including receiving, manufacturing, packaging and labeling, shipping, general sanitation and employee training.

Procedures for specific operations are also discussed including boning, cutting and trimming; poultry cutting; pumping and smoking or cooking; canning; and formulation.

Meat and poultry processing plants may voluntarily apply to USDA for approval of their plant quality control system. Approval is based on assurance the system will produce products in compliance with wholesomeness and labeling requirements of the federal inspection laws.

Quality control inspection is available to processing plants which produce, cut or package such items as cooked, cured and smoked meats, roast beef, hamburger, frozen dinners, and soups containing meat and poultry. It does not apply to inspection of animals in slaughtering operations.

Copies of the guidebook (Agriculture Handbook NO. 586) are available from the Information Division, U S. Department of Agriculture, 26 Federal Plaza, Room 1653, New York, N Y , 10278

Making bacon artifically

I have two sows that I would like to have artificially bred. We live in Berks County and have had no luck in finding anyone who knows how to artificially inseminate hogs. Can you help us find such a service?

Warren P. Baker
Bethel

Dr. Trayer comments:

The industry of artificial insemination in swine is not as advanced or well developed as it is in dairy and beef cattle for several reasons

First, the industry is fairly new when compared to the dairy and beef industry.

Secondly, there is a lack of skilled, experienced AI technicians available.

Thirdly, results from AI have been varied in different swine operations and situations, so that AI is not advancing as rapidly as it has in the dairy and beef industries

One of the primary problems appears to be with the variability in conception and litters farrowed from AI services, compared to natural services in the swine industry Whether this is related to the aforementioned areas or some other reproductive fact we haven't identified is unknown.

Various individuals feel strongly one way or the other about AI and its application in the swine industry. Those who have excellent or good results feel very strongly for its use and, of course, those with poor results feel the other way.

This is not to say the idea of AI in swine is not a valid one. From a health standpoint alone, it is an excellent idea Because one of the major areas for potential introduction of undesired disease into the herd is through the addition of replacement or different male lines, usually only a few animals are added One or two, or six or ten can jeopardize the whole operation.

AI, along with reducing health problems, is one way to achieve the same advantages that the dairy and beef industries have enjoyed — the more rapid distribution of a superior genetic potential thoughout the country by the use of AI than would be possible with natural service.

Concerning an individual who offers thes A.I. services on a routine basis, there is no one that I know of that breeds sows for hog producers privately. You might also want to get in touch with one of the large AI services that deals in frozen semen.

Although I do not endorse one company over the other, an artificial insemination company that advertises fairly often in trade journals is International Boar Semen. Their address and phone number is: P O. Box 538, Eldora, Iowa, 50627, 800/247-7877.

I think the idea of not maintaining a boar for two animals is excellent. However, if these are gilts, you may have a hard time in getting good conception or even good signs that they're in heat to know when to breed them. Proper heat observation is essential for a successful artificial insemination program.

N.J. meat plant may lose inspection services

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The U S. Department of Agriculture will withdraw federal meat inspection and meat grading and acceptance services indefinitely from a Linden, N.J. firm unless its secretary-treasurer, Gerald David, gives up all association within 90 days and sells his company stock within one year.

The firm, Mlotok Beef Company, Inc., cannot process meat products without federal inspection.

Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service, said the decision was issued by USDA Administrative Law Judge Victor W. Palmer after USDA and the firm reached a consent agreement.

Houston said under the consent order, grading and inspection services will be withdrawn indefinitely if the firm violates the Federal Meat Inspection Act by preparing, selling, transporting or attempting to distribute adulterated or misbranded product within two years.

David was convicted on January 12 in U.S. District Court in New Jersey of one felony count for unlawfully giving money to a USDA inspector. David was fined $2,000 and placed on probation for two years.

Under the Federal Meat Inspection Act, only wholesome, unadulterated meat products can be sold in interstate commerce.

The Milk Check

TOM JURCHAK
County Agent

SEEING DOUBLE

The average producer might think he is seeing double when he gets his milk check for June deliveries to Order 2 handlers. The uniform price was the same for June as it was for May - $12.83 for 3.5 milk at the 201-210 mile zone. However, the price was the only thing that stayed the same. Everything else changed.

Production dropped from May's peak of 1.03 billion pounds to 965 million. That was three per cent less than last month on a daily basis but still the highest for June in 10 years.

Fluid sales dropped two per cent or 250,000 pounds a day to make a Class I utilization of 37.2 per cent the lowest for June in 25 years. Your class prices changed very little - down three cents on Class I and one cent on Class II - reflecting the recent drops in the Minnesota-Wisconsin Series.

However, there's comfort in knowing that price-wise you've hit the bottom for this year and there's nowhere to go but up. In June you put 40 cents a hundred into the Louisville Plan fund - the same as May - but you won't do that in July so you'll gain that much.

On the other hand, don't expect any improvement in your Class prices either and with schools closed for vacation you'll be losing Class I sales. If the hot, humid weather that cut your production three percent in June can continue into July you still may get all of that 40 cents in your milk check and perhaps a little more.

HARD WORK

No one is criticizing the Commodity Credit Corporation for not buying enough butter, powder and cheese to get the manufacturing grade milk price up to the support price of $12.80 for 3.5 milk.

In June they were still 22 cents short of the support price even though they were buying over 500 million pounds of milk equivalent a week. No one complained because the more they spend now the more they'll have to cut back when the new price support program starts in October.

However, you have to give them credit for working hard and moving the manufacturing milk price up 13 cents since February right through the biggest Spring flush you ever produced. It took a lot of dollars to get it from $12.45 in February to $12.58 in June even though it's still not up to the $12.80 you expected.

In the meantime, the Minnesota-Wisconsin Series, which determines your Class prices, did what it usually does in the Spring and dropped eight cents from March to June. Back in February the M-W was 21 cents higher than the average manufacturing grade price but because of the seasonal decline in the M-W and the large CCC purchases they are now only a penny apart - $12.58 for manufacturing grade milk and $12.59 for the M-W in June. Another indication of the unusual marketing situation brought on by record high production of milk and CCC purchases.

New high-yield wheat variety ready for release

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — After a six-year statewide test period, the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station is ready to release a new high-yield wheat variety that promises early maturity, excellent baking quality and good disease resistance.

The new soft red winter wheat variety is called "Severn," and research scientists with the Experiment Station at the University of Maryland say it has proven to be an ideal partner for double cropping with soybeans.

Official release of the new wheat variety is scheduled to coincide with the "Crops and Soils Research Field Day" August 18 at the Wye Research Farm near Queenstown.

"Severn's" yield says James R. Miller, chairman of the University's Department of Agronomy, averages seven bushels per acre more than "Arthur," a widely-planted wheat variety in Maryland. Its maturnity date is similar to "Arthur," adding to its potential popularity for wheat-soybean double cropping by Maryland farmers.

Foundation seed of "Severn" was produced in Maryland during 1980-81 and will be distributed through foundation seed organizations this fall.

Small amounts of seed should be available for farmer's use by fall 1982 and seed should be generally available in 1983, said Miller. Breeder seed will be maintained by the Maryland Agricultural Experiment Station.

NEW ! RO-CROP CULTIVATOR with the Exclusive "No Wobble" Parallel Links

One of the weaknesses of many cultivators is that the parallel linkage is light weight and bearing areas are small All too soon the assembly starts to wear and break down Brillion's NO WOBBLE links are made of cast iron (12 lbs each) Each end is equipped with full 2" wide non-lube sleeve bearings

The Brillion "S" tine cultivator (model BRS) with four-way tooth movement is designed for high speed cultivation, especially in conjunction with chemical weed control The "S" tines also mulch the soil and level the ground for easier harvesting Available in rigid and folding models for four to 12 rows

Get rid of crop residue in a hurry!

International® 50/60 Shredders

These shredders truly fine-shred heavy, tough cotton, corn or sorghum stalks to speed decomposition, ease your tillage, planting and cultivating work They're also useful for clipping pastures, shredding weeds, tall grass, brush And they actually require less power to operate because knives are spiral-mounted around the rotor so they hit your crop at different times, conserving power.

- 2 sizes, 150 and 170 in wide
- Shatter-shear type knives can be reversed to match the job; blunt edge shatters stalks completely
- Wheels easily adjust up or down for cutting height, in and out to match row spacings, endwise transport for 170-in model
- Safety features full shielded drives, gear case, extended end sheets, front-mounted curtain

Finance plans available.

4-H'er experiences "last" round-up

BY SUSAN KAUFFMAN
Staff Correspondent

Many 4-H projects have come to a close in the past few weeks and each year there are a number of young people who participate for their last time.

Bonnie Lamborn, a seventeen-year-old from southern Chester County is one of these club members who say they have gone to the "last round-up."

In 4-H terminology the round-up is the day when local members come together for judging of their projects, scoring of recordbooks and competition for placings with other county members.

Bonnie graduated from Oxford Area High School this past June. She sees this summer as the time to leave the FFA and 4-H programs and pursue studies in a possible vocation apart from agriculture. Next week she begins classes at the Gordon Phillips School in Coatesville to study for a career in cosmetology.

Although she seems to be making a clean break from her years of involvement in 4-H and FFA, she views these experiences as valuable and rewarding — preparing her with skills which she is glad to take into whatever the next few years hold for her.

Bonnie is a very frank young lady who has some very definite opinions She has had to learn some painful lessons during her ten years in 4-H and four in FFA. She has also had to deal with disappointments and frustrations. Add to that the responsibilities that are the lot of a dairy farmer's daughter such as daily chores and seasonal work, and one might conclude that perhaps this summer is a good time to get away from all of those demands and frustrations.

But Bonnie doesn't see things that way. She emphatically states, "I couldn't think of a better way to grow up than on a farm, like I did!"

Bonnie has gone to a public school all her life where town and farm youngsters learn under the same programs. From the early days in elementary school, Bonnie was aware that country and town living were different. When she went to high school she could see an even greater difference in life styles. She followed her older brother's and sister's example and joined the 4-H dairy club. She also enrolled in the FFA program in her freshmen year mainly because as she explained "I saw all the exciting things my older brother was doing in FFA."

During her FFA involvement, Bonnie said she mainly carried dairy projects with a dairy herd being her senior year project.

In all, Bonnie has twelve animals registered in her name. They are incorporated into her parent's milking herd. The Frisky Acres prefix gained public attention through Bonnie showing her animals at local fairs in recent years.

Her parents, George and Suzanne Lamborn, milk about 35 registered Holsteins on their 160 acre farm located in the south western corner of Chester County, near Nottingham.

Mr. and Mrs Lamborn and Bonnie make up the work force on the farm with the exception of a summer helper who is a student at Penn State gaining experience on the Lamborn farm. Bonnie is glad for her help. She recalled doing the barn clean-up chores last summer by herself.

Bonnie says she likes working with the young animals best. She takes care of the calves, tends to the feeding of grain to the cows and shares the clean-up chores. A knee injury which has gradually become more painful throughout the last three years has kept her from doing the milking in the tie stall barn.

This same knee injury cut short her FFA days to the extent that she had to miss the Penn State Days competitions in June because surgery was scheduled then.

In her sophomore year, Bonnie competed at Penn State in showmanship. In her junior year, she participated in the interview contest — reflecting her studies in business courses in addition to the vo-ag program she carried during high school

Bonnie worke[illegible] and made the team "a couple of years," as she put it. Giving reasons for judging and placing decisions, was a tough job for Bonnie, she said. The judging team competed four or five times a year at the All-American in Harrisburg, and at various fairs such as the Timonium Fair in Maryland.

When Bonnie was a greenhand, first year FFA, there were probably 35 greenhands, she said. When she graduated there were forty-five senior FFA members. A third of the greenhands were girls, but the majority of the graduating members were girls, according to Bonnie. She served as chapter secretary during her senior year and received the Keystone farmer award.

Bonnie looked back over her FFA days and said they were busy years when there were a lot of interesting activities going on and chapter members worked together.

The ten years Bonnie spent in 4-H were not wasted ones, she said. She began with a calf when she was eight years old, following her older brother's and sister's example. The last six years her father was the Oxford dairy club leader. This year Bonnie served as club president.

Selecting an animal for a project, caring for it, grooming it for competition and round-up and keeping the recordbook for each project taught her responsiblity she said.

"Knowing you did your best whether you end up at the top of the showline or not is important," she began But she went on to admit, "It took me a long time to get over the disappointment of doing my best and being at the bottom of the line. Our home-raised animals were just not as good as some of the other show animals. But, boy, was I every happy when one of my animals was chosen a Grand Champion at a fair when I was fifteen!"

Bonnie says she likes both showing and fitting aspects of 4-H. She never really perfected the techniques to the extent that others have, but she liked those tasks because, "They are some things you can do yourself; they are up to you, in your control."

Bonnie Lamborn displays the plaque presented to her acknowledging the 1980 first place 2-year-old Holstein in the State Holstein Association for milk production. The trophy was presented by her local association for Frisky Acres Crusader Arlinda who produced 21,900 pounds of milk and 828 pounds of fat.

Bonnie has shown her Frisky Acres animals over the years at three or four shows and fairs a summer. While not consistently in the winner's circle, she has earned many ribbons and trophies. She had the Junior Champion at the 1980 4-H District round-up and a Grand Champion at the Kimberton Fair three years ago, among other awards.

In addition to contending with the extra work involved in showing animals at fairs, Bonnie has had to deal with remarks from spectators who know nothing about dairy animals and the even more frustrating experience of losing a show animal. After a hurricane-like storm felled the tent at a fair her cow was brought home feverish from the drenching downpour. Later, she died.

In addition to the showing and fitting that goes on with a dairy 4-H project, Bonnie recalled the club meetings and group activities which the members shared together. The demonstrations by older members, the meetings and the summer trips all "opened me up a lot," she said. "I was the shy one in the corner who never had anything to say. "Four-H helped me a lot to be able to get up in front of a group or a crowd."

The Oxford Dairy Club is composed of nineteen members. Fifteen have Holsteins. The club meets monthly moving from one member's home to another member's home throughout the year. The members compete at the county round-up in mid July at the Kimberton Fair Grounds. This, her last year, Bonnie showed a three-year-old Elevation which placed fourth and a Jerry Junior calf which placed third.

At the State Holstein convention this past January, Bonnie was recognized for having the first place two-year old for milk production in the state. Frisky Acres Crusader Arlinda finished 1980 with a 305 day record of 21,900 pounds of milk and 828 pounds of butterfat. The county Holstein Association presented her with a trophy for this same award.

Bonnie says she would choose growing up no other way than on a farm. She says she learned a lot from FFA, her advisors, from her 4-H experiences and from the social activities and group sharing.

Bonnie may have gone to her "last round-up," but the lessons she learned along the way she feels will continue to help her with the challenges ahead of her

Bonnie enjoys working with the calves on her parent's farm. She is preparing this calf for showing. Over the last ten years in 4-H, Bonnie has had plenty of practice.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

There's long been a theory that the longer a man and wife are married, the more they resemble one another. A group of researchers recently issued a news release disagreeing with that widespread belief.

Well, I'm not so sure Fact is, the farmer and I seem to be growing more alike with the rapidly passing years.

Once, I would have fallen into despair over the manure-caked jeans and piles of boots that seemed to materialize whenever he passed near the house

Now, my denims lay in piles at the foot of the washing machine with the same crusty buildup and clinging barn odor And I confess to having two pairs of shoes — all falling apart rapidly — gracing the basement porch.

Our hands consitute a manicurist's nightmare Gates, nails, splinters, grease, detergents, mechanical upkeep and daily work with cows take their toll, leaving us with similarly battered mitts

An identical note of aggravation flows from our voiceboxes simultaneously when Janet slips back out of her stall for the third time or the heifers clear the fence Again

His eyes are blue and mine are greenish, but they turn the same shade of streaked bloodshot pink after late night meetings, seemingly endless bookwork or a difficult midnight calf delivery

The same look of despair crosses both our faces when we try to reckon the monthly milk check to the towering stack of bills wanting paid

Look-alike grins of satisfaction and thankfulness appear, too, when we've safely delivered a healthy, heifer calf.

And, to top it off, I'm learning to copy his snore Or so he says You couldn't prove it by me.

But if so, at least I have the very best, most expert teacher around.

Don't bury your onions

LITITZ — Gardeners often regard the onion as a root crop. Actually, the onion bulb is 95% leaf tissue. The bulb has a water-thin stem, referred to as a "stem plate" because it is flat, much like a dinner plate. Roots grow downward from this compressed stem. The rest of the onion bulb is composed of the thickened bases of the leaves.

Gardeners frequently make the mistake of mounding soil over the onion bulb. When this is done, the bulb stops enlarging and decay organisms often invade the bulb tissue.

The bulb must continue to be exposed to the sun; gardeners are advised to leave about two-thirds of the bulb exposed. For true root crops, such as carrots, the tops should be covered with soil.

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

My trip to Eurcpe was a real adventure. It was an emotional experience traveling through the very areas from which my ancestors came in the early 1700's. In the next few articles, I would like to share with you some of the sights which I saw and the places that I went.

The tour group was composed of 43 other farm folks from Virginia, New York, Vermont and Maryland. We not only saw big cities in five countries, but also visited dairy farms and farm homes in most all of these countries.

We traveled first class and stayed in hotels which charged from $80 to $100 per night per room. For 15 days I lived in the lap of luxury and had all of my meals prepared for us. Of course, some were more ample than others.

Each morning started with a continental breakfast, courtesy of the hotel, and included hard rolls, butter, jelly and coffee or tea. I did miss my cereal, fruit and milk, though.

Our one complaint was the lack of water. Apparently Europeans do not have water with their meals. So we were often thirsty, although our tour guide tried to get pitchers of water for us. The one thing that was in ample supply was beer, wine, scotch and bourbon.

I left New York City at night and after 7 hours on a plane carrying some 400 people at 33,000 feet and traveling 650 miles per hour, we landed at the Heathrow Airport on London. A bus took us to our hotel where we saw lots of other tourists from Indian and Japan. Some wore their colorful native costumes.

Never before could I truly understand when my daughters spoke of "jet lag" but now I do. It took a bit of resting to make up for a night's lost sleep. We turned our clocks ahead 6 hours by the time we got to Paris.

Our bus was brand new and we were told it cost 62,000 pounds or about $120,000. We walked through Westminster Abbey which was built in 1090 and where many kings and queens are buried. In the afternoon we saw the changing of the guard at Buckingham Palace and then drove into the countryside to visit Windsor Castle which was one of the first fortresses built to defend London. It contained many paintings, gun and sword collections, knight's armor and ornate furniture in the huge rooms. We were shown Piccadilly Circus, Big Ben, Parliament and the Thames.

Next week I'll tell you about the English farm and the Kent County Agriculture Show.

Summer salads are an inside/outside treat

Summer is a time for inside-outside foods — those that go well either on the indoor dinner table or in the outdoor picnic basket. Some perennial favorites are old fashioned egg salad, potato salad, macaroni salad, and gelatin salads.

All these salads are really quick to fix and can be prepared ahead and kept refrigerated.

Fresh vegetables are in abundance this time of year - what better time to make a delicious, fresh salad? But don't limit your selection of salad ingredients to vegetables, remember that eggs and noodles taste great too. Clockwise is macaroni salad, old fashioned egg salad and mustard potato salad.

Old Fashioned Egg Salad

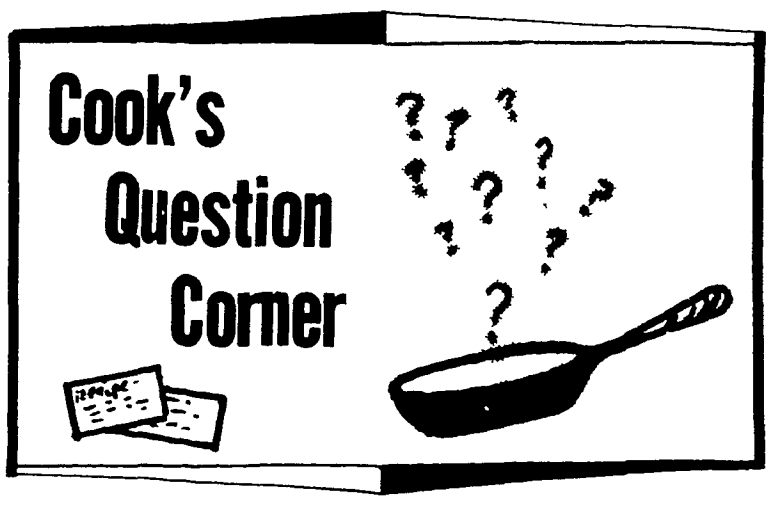
1/4 c. mayonnaise
1 t. flaked, dried onion
1/2 c. finely chopped celery
2 T. lemon juice
1/2 t salt
6 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
4 lettuce leaves

Blend together mayonnaise, lemon juice, onion, salt and pepper. Reserve 4 slices from center of 1 egg for garnish Chop remaining eggs. Stir copped eggs and celery into mayonnaise mixture until moistened throughout. Cover and refrigerate until ready to serve. For each serving, spoon about 1/2 c. egg salad onto a lettuce leaf. Garnish with reserved egg slices.

Mustard Potato Salad

Stir the following ingredients into the old fashioned egg salad
1 pound potatoes, cooked peeled and diced
1/2 c. mayonnaise
1 t. prepared mustard
1/2 t. flaked onion
1/4 t. salt

Stir well and serve.



QUESTION - Does anyone have some good recipes to make horse radish and a way to keep it from getting dark?

L.W. Ziegler, Harleysville

QUESTION - I've heard that whey (liquid remaining from making cheese) is very healthy for you. I would like some recipes or uses for it. Also I enjoy making my own noodles (both egg and spinach), but what would be the best long term storage method?

Wanda Zeigler, Dillsburg

NOTE - If you have suggestions, recipes or ideas for our reader's questions, send them to Cook's Question Corner, Lancaster Farming, Box 366, Lititz, PA, 17543.

The White 5100 Seed Boss... A Breakthrough in Planting Accuracy

ACCURACY

The new White® 5100 Seed Boss™ Planter represents a breakthrough into a new era of accuracy. Accuracy that can payoff with increased germination, better stands and higher yields for you.

Exclusive new dual depth gauge wheels with walking-beam linkages allow both wheels to act with complementary action. So when one gauge wheel goes over a large clod or rock, the other remains in contact with the seedbed. As a result the height of the two wheels is averaged and the double-disc opener raises only half the height of the obstacle. Gauge wheels on competitive models act in tandem causing the seed disc opener to raise the full height of the obstacle. The White payoff . . . greater seed depth accuracy.

More gentle seed handling with a new pressurized metering system adds greater uniformity in seed spacing. A central blower provides constant air pressure to each metering unit. (Individual row blowers on 4-row models). Air then "holds" the seed in a cell on the seed disc until a gentle brush cut-off allows it to fall in a natural trajectory through the seed tube. The design of this system essentially eliminates forward motion of the seed, minimizing roll and bounce in the seed trench. The White payoff . . . greater in-row accuracy with minimal seed coat damage.

New constant-pressure press wheels exert uniform down pressure on the sides of the trench to consistently firm moist soil around the seed despite changing soil or terrain. The White payoff . . . optimum germinating conditions.

A host of standard performance and convenience features are integrated into every 5100 Seed Boss. Features such as a 7x7-inch main frame, hydraulic markers, quick population change transmission and new 1½ bushel seed hoppers. And it's all ready for you in 8-row folding, 6- and 4-row models.

See Your White Dealer for Accuracy that pays off.

2 T. vinegar
2 t. chives

Mix the ham, eggs, pepper, and celery. Combine the vinegar and mayonnaise, mix with ham mixture and vegetables. Arrange on lettuce leaves in a bowl. Cover with slices of cucumber and sprinkle with chives. Serves 5.

Ever wanted to try making your own pancake syrup? Now you can try. The recipe is provided courtesy of Rose Hoover of Dallas in response to a request in Cook's Question Corner.

Pancade Syrup

Wash all fruit or berries well. Drain, but do not dry. For each 6 cups of berries, add 4 1/2 cups of sugar. Set in cool place for eight hours or overnight. Stir well and place on stove. Set a candy thermometer on side of pot. Cook until the thermometer reaches about 219 or 220 degrees. This will take about 20 or 30 minutes. Stir often to prevent scorching since fruit will settle to bottom later in cooking. You can remove pieces of fruit or berries with a slotted spoon or strain, then reheat and ladle into hot sterilized jars. Using two piece lids, seal. I prefer to leave berries in the syrup because they are nice on pancakes or ice cream, plump and sweet.

Potatoes termed "potentially hazardous food"

PENN STATE — As a result of several cases of botulism caused by potato salad, the director of the Division of Retail Food Protection, Food and Drug Administration, has declared baked or boiled potatoes a "potentially hazardous food" and warns against holding potatoes at room temperature for any length of time.

Potato salad was implicated in three outbreaks, or 47 cases, of type A botulism in the United States since 1969. Baked potatoes used in preparing the potato salad which caused one of the outbreaks were left unrefrigerated after baking for a period of time prior to use in the salad.

Analysis by the Food and Drug Administration at that time identified type A and type B Clostridium botulinum spores on samples of raw potatoes obtained from the stock of one of the restaurants involved in the outbreaks.

As a result of the outbreaks, researchers have conducted various laboratory studies designed to determine how potato salad could become a vehicle for botulism. Results of these laboratory studies showed that potatoes inoculated with C. botulinum spores contain toxin when held at room temperature for some time following baking.

The FDA now considers baked or boiled potatoes a "potentially hazardous food," as defined in the agency's ordinances. According to the division director, the ordinances require that cooked potatoes be maintained either cold (45° or below) or hot (140° or above).

This will minimize the potential for toxin production in potatoes that may later be used without further preparation, or in soups, salads, or other food products which require little or no further heat treatment.

MICROWAVE OVEN SPEEDS DEFROSTING

Quick and efficient defrosting of frozen foods is one of the big pluses of a microwave oven. All ovens on the market today have a special defrost setting, but the power level assigned to this setting may vary anywhere from 70 percent of full power to 30 percent.

If the defrost setting on your oven is higher than 50 percent, you may find you get better results with a lower setting. Lower power levels also reduce the amount of attention needed during defrosting.

At lower power levels, the oven cycles on and off. During the "off" periods the heat has time to equalize. At the higher power levels, the outside of the food may start to cook before the inside defrosts.

The final quality of the food you serve from your freezer depends on two factors. The first is good freezer management. Food should be packaged properly, kept at a constant 0° F. temperature, and should not be stored beyond the recommended time for that particular food. The second factor is the attention you give the food during the defrosting process.

In general, porous, low moisture foods such as breads and pastries defrost quickly and evenly. They need little attention. Dense foods such as meats, seafoods, poultry and frozen casserole dishes are a little more complicated. The following tips may help simplify the process:

Cover meats with wax paper. It will hold the warmth around the food as it begins to defrost.

If the meat has been frozen in its grocery store wrapper, remove the styrofoam tray as soon as possible in the defrosting process. The tray insulates the bottom of the meat like an ice chest. Even the paper liner used to absorb meat juices will draw microwave energy away from the meat and should be removed.

If you are defrosting poultry in a plastic bag, be sure to slit the bag and pour off any liquid as it accumulates. The liquid absorbs energy and slows defrosting.

Foods frozen in glass containers don't have to be removed from the container before defrosting. Just pop the food in, container and all.

If you have an older oven without a defrost cycle you can still use the oven to defrost. Set the timer on the microwave allowing two minutes per pound of food. Rotate the item a ¼ turn and turn the food over halfway through the estimated defrosting time. At the end of the defrosting time rest the food 20 minutes to allow heat to transfer to the center. Test center. If food is still frozen, re-set the timer allowing 1 minute per pound of food. Rotate ¼ turn halfway through the defrosting time. Rest 15 minutes. Test center. if the food is still frozen, repeat until the center is thawed.

FREEZING MIXED VEGETABLES

Packaged mixed frozen vegetables in supermarkets come in a variety of combinations, and those with broccoli and cauliflower generally command the highest price. These vegetable combinations are not only pleasing to the eye but appeal to the tastes of many families. So, it's not surprising that many home freezer owners want to freeze their own vegetable combinations.

It's easy to do. The essential ingredient for individually quick freezing vegetables at home, sometimes called tray freezing, is patience. Following are some general directions:

1. Decide on the mix. Most commercially frozen products combine 3 to 4 different vegetables.
2. Prepare vegetables for freezing.
3. Cut, slice or dice vegetables into appropriate sized pieces.
4. Blanch, chill and drain.
5. Spread vegetables on a tray making sure pieces do not touch one another.
6. Place tray in rapid freeze section of the freezer. If pieces are small, vegetables will freeze in 1 to 2 hours.
7. Package and label mixed vegetables. Store at 9° or lower in home freezer.

This method is also excellent for freezing onion and pepper discs, rings or strips. Store in large freezer bags or other resealable containers. Remove only the number of items you need for casseroles and other dishes. Reseal bags and return to the freezer immediately.

Seed some fall vegetables now

LEESPORT — Now is the time to reseed the areas from which you harvested your early peas, onions, and beets, says James J. McKeehen, Delaware County Extension Agricultural Agent.

Vegetables in the cabbage family such as brussels sprouts, broccoli, cauliflower, Chinese cabbage, and regular cabbage produce better quality crops when they mature in the cooler fall weather and are ideal for seeding in this empty space.

Growing plants to transplant stage does not take much garden room if you start the seed in a "nursery." This means sowing the seed rather thickly in rows about 10 inches apart. Seeds in a packet of broccoli or cauliflower can easily fit into as row 10 to 15 feet long. The seeds should be spaced about 1½ inches apart in the row.

When the seedlings are 4 to 6 inches tall they should be transplanted to the empty area in your garden and spaced according to directions on the seed packet. Before transplanting, be sure the plants are thoroughly soaked.

Soil should be well prepared and after setting the plants apply a little "starter" solution at the base of each plant. The "starter" can be purchased in most garden stores. It will be labeled as 100% soluble fertilizer. It usually has a ratio of 15-15-15 or 20-20-20. After the plants are well established, a sidedressing of 5-10-5 or 5-10-10 fertilizer should be applied between the rows.

Keep a watchful eye for invasions by devastating insects advises McKeehen, late crops must be kept moist because they will not be productive unless they have a continuing supply of water. Brussels sprouts will continue to produce nice buds right up to late fall during most. Broccoli, cauliflower and Chinese cabbage will withstand light frosts and some cabbage varieties will survive a heavy freeze.

Plan ahead before taking Rover on trips

If your mom and dad are planning a summer vacation away from the farm and you just have to bring your dog along, do him or her a favor and read these tips:

Unless your pet is accustomed to riding, it should be preconditioned to travel before you start any long trips. Many animals do not travel well, while others are excellent travel companions.

To assure that traveling with a pet will be fun, prepare for the trip in advance.

Have your pet's booster shots up-to-date. This will protect the animal from disease. Obtain a health certificate, and take it with you, in case it is requested during your travel.

Take two collars: a leather collar with license, and a choke chain with ID tags, in case your pet is lost or strays. A muzzle may also come in handy.

If needed, take tranquilizers or special medication from your own veterinarian.

Also, take your pet's favorite food for the entire trip. This will help to prevent digestive upsets from dietary changes that travel excitement can cause.

To reduce the chance of car sickness, feed your pet in the evenings. It is a good idea to remove the pet's water at bedtime.

Exercise your pet during travel. Exercise in the mornings, and throughout the day at rest stops.

Pets locked in cars in the sun on hot, humid days are subject to heat stroke and suffication. When pets are left in the car, park in the shade and leave the windows open slighly for ventilation.

Pets that enjoy riding can be good travel companions if you anticipate their needs, and prepare for them ahead of time.

Battling the bark

Doubtless you've heard the expression "his bark is worse than his bite." For someone spending a sleepless night listening to your dog howling, nothing could be truer.

Barking is a dog's normal response to a variety of circumstances. How long or how vigorously a particular dog will bark depends on the situation and the dog's breeding.

Terriers or crossbred terriers, for example, are generally nervous, rather high strung and full of energy. They may work off excess energy by barking, especially if they don't receive enough exercise. Other breeds like the Norwegian elkhound, bred years ago to protect herds and property, bark to defend their homes from intruders, including birds, squirrels and the like.

Boredom is the main reason for long periods of senseless barking. A dog left alone indoors for hours at a time has little to do and will bark in the hope of attracting attention and companionship. It can respond to the telephone or the sound of people in an apartment hallway with an hour or more of nonstop noise.

Even more annoying is the night barker. This dog usually has slept all day and has excessive energy left over at bedtime. In such cases, a hard run at nightfall may help the dog become tired enough to sleep.

Anything you can do to provide some distraction while you're away for long periods can help control a barking dog. Some pets respond to a few new toys. Others are comforted by the sound of the television.

A major part of the solution is to let your dog know that he cannot bark indiscriminately and get away with it. "Informing" your dog will require time and effort on your part.

The next time your dog begins to bark at the wrong time, reprimand

(Turn to Page C14)

Dogs can be your best friend

A dog on a farm is more than just a watch dog and a cow dog, he or she is also a pet, a companion and a playmate. And as your playmate, she is under your care most of the time. So give her the best care and love you can because, (to restate an old cliche) a dog can be everybody's best friend.

National chicken cooking contest names winners

OCEAN CITY, Md. — A farm wife from South Dakota who has won numerous blue ribbon for her cooking at county and state fairs captured the $10,000 first prize in the 1981 National Chicken Cooking Contest, July 29.

June Herke, 47, of Howard, SD, called the dish that became this year's best chicken recipe, "Impossible Chicken Pie." It is a deep dish pie made with chopped chicken seasoned with Mozzarella cheese, tomato paste, basil and oregano.

Placing second and winning $4,000 was Hilda C. Parsons of New Hampshire. She cooked "Chicken Breast Piquante."

Other winners were: Marilyn Beach of California, "Chicken Ole," $3,000, third, Ritusko Nishida of Hawaii, "Island Chicken With Vegetables," $2,000, fourth; and Winifred Logue of Arkansas, "Breast of Chicken in Cheese," $1,000, fifth.

The 33rd annual chicken cooking competition, sponsored by the National Broiler Council, was held in the Ocean City Convention Hall. Fifty-one finalists, one from each state and the District of Columbia, prepared their favorite chicken recipes in individual mini-kitchens set up around the arena. Hundreds of vacationers and local residents mingled with the contestants, discussing their recipes and savoring the aromas of chicken being cooked with a variety of seasonings.

Mrs. Herke says she always serves on the food committee for her local community projects. She and her husband, August, have two sons and two daughters, all grown. She was raised in a family of 16 children and started competing in farm and home shows at an early age.

Mrs Parsons represented her state in the 1975 national chicken cook-off. She and her husband, Harold, live in a small town of less than a thousand and she says she has always loved to cook. Her recipe uses boned chicken breasts cooked with pineapple and almonds and seasoned with limeade and rum.

Married to Louis Beach, the California contestant began cooking as a child. Her winning recipe has a Mexican flavor with taco seasoning, chilies and crushed corn chips.

A tax clerk in Honolulu, Mrs. Nishida and her husband, Tadao, have three sons, two of whom are West Point graduates. Several years ago she won the grand prize in a soup stock contest. Her winning chicken recipe combines boned thighs with sliced cabbage, seasoned with ginger and soy sauce.

Mrs. Logue and her husband, William, combined a trip to the cook-off with sightseeing in the Eastern Shore area where his ancestors first settled in 1673. Her recipe uses boned chicken breasts rolled around a whole chile and coated with cheese and bread crumbs.

A panel of national food experts selected the five best recipes following several hours of testing and evaluating the dishes. Winners were announced at an Awards banquet at the Carousel Hotel, headquarters for the event.

him with a firm, loud "NO!" Clap a folded newspaper against his hind quarters to impress your order upon him.

Then leave the area so that the pet cannot see you. Stay within earshot, and return quickly with a sharp reprimand if he begins to bark. Each time stay away for a longer period of time, buy always return to scold him at the sound of barking. You may have to enlist the help of several friends, but the idea that you are unhappy with the barking must be reinforced for several days. If you stop too soon, your dog will resume the old habit.

For additional ideas on what to do about a stubborn barking problem, discuss the situation with your veterinarian. Neutering an adult male dog will reduce his barking. The veterinarian can also discuss other alternatives, such as a muzzle for the dog, with you

Liming is one of the most important factors in keeping your soil in the highest productive range. By raising the pH from a level below 6.0 to 6.5 or higher you can expect to harvest as much as 5 more bushels of corn per acre with similar increases for all other forage and cash crops

MOPRO
LIQUID SILAGE FORTIFIER

A revolutionary new concept in improving silages. University tested and proven MOPRO Liquid Silage Fortifier is formulated to balance the major mineral and protein deficiencies of silages. It also prevents loss from mold and rot after being removed from the silo or trench. MOPRO is added at the time of ensiling and is applied by metering equipment with very little handling cost. MOPRO will not corrode mild steel tanks or brass fittings and has no free ammonia odor to irritate the eyes or skin. MOPRO is a homogeneous solution of ammonia salts, urea, cane molasses, and minerals (except salt and calcium) in an efficient liquid carrier. It provides nitrogen for improved fermentation in the rumen and contains a mineral balance of phosphorous, magnesium, and trace elements. MOPRO 100 will give a resulting silage of up to 14.3% protein.

David Wenger gets agribusiness honor

KANSAS CITY, MO. — David Wenger, 21, son of Carl and Margaret Wenger, of Myerstown, Lebanon County, has been named one of four Regional Star Agribusinessmen by the National Future Farmers of America.

Wenger, who serves as vice-president and purchasing agent for the family farm equipment business at Myerstown, is the Eastern Region Star Agribusinessman.

He will compete with the three other regional winners at the 54th National FFA Convention Nov. 12-14 in Kansas City for the top honor as Star Agribusinessman of America.

The other three regional winners include:

–Michael Welch, 21, student and cooperative employee from Speedwell, Tn., representing the Southern Region.

–Dale Wolf Jr., 21, owner and operating manager of a greenhouse from Baldwin, Wisc., representing the Central Region.

–Terry Daniel, 21, landscape contractor from Mesa, Ariz., representing the Western Region.

The regional winners were selected by the National FFA Officers and Board of Diorectors based on the candidates achievements in one or more areas of agribusiness, as well as leadership in FFA.

The four regional winners were picked from 778 candidates for the American Farmer Degree. Only about one in every 600 FFA members receives this highest degree of FFA membership.

As regional winners, each of the Star Agribusinessmen will receive a $500 award from the National FFA Foundation, Inc. at the national convention. The winner of the Star Agribusinessman of America honor, picked from the four, will receive an additional $500 award.

This marks the 12th year that this top award has been given by the FFA to recognize outstanding members becoming established in agribusiness occupations.

Wenger started with the family machinery business, Wenger's Farm Machinery, Inc., in his pre-teen years by attending farm sales every weekend with his father and older brother. As he grew older, he gained experience in the appraising and purchasing of farm equipment by observing his father and brother and listening to conversations with other dealers.

FFA state officers see Reagan at talks

WASHINGTON, D C — Two area Future Farmers of America, who are currently serving as state officers, were among state officers from throughout the country who received a surprise visit from President Reagan on Thursday, July 30

The two local state officers were Doug Hershberger, son of Mr and Mrs. Robert Hershberger, of Quarryville, Lancaster County, who is president of the Pennsylvania FFA Association; and Glenn T Wenger, son of Mr. and Mrs Carl T Wenger, of Myerstown, Lebanon County, who is state vice-president

President Reagan greeted the group of officers after Vice President George Bush spoke to the FFA leaders in special ceremonies in the White House Rose Garden

U.S. Secretary of Agriculture John Block and General Motors Representative Robin L. Morris greet Doug Hershberger, President of the Pennsylvania Association of Future Farmers of America, during the FFA State Presidents' Conference in Washington, D.C.

You're going to have greater opportunities, you're going to see more, you're going to know more, you're going to be able to live longer and be healthier. There isn't anything we can't do it we set our minds to it," Reagan said.

Vice President Bush told the FFA membes, "I think your spirit, your dedication to free enterprise, your values and your belief in God and in country are the best antidote that we have to an excessive cynicism that this country has endured over the past few years."

In welcoming the group, Secretary of Education Terrel Bell said the FFA helps solve the nation's biggest educational problem — motivation.

The White House meeting was a highlight of the week-long FFA State Presidents' Conference. The conference, sponsored by General Motors Corporation through the National FFA Foundation, Inc., helps state officers lead more effectively by understanding the FFA and America's free enterprise system.

The FFA officers hosted a Congressional Breaktast to thank Senators and Representatives for Approximately 85 percent of the Wenger business involves the selling of used tractors and farm machinery and is one of the largest used equipment dealerships in the East

"In order to maintain an impressive inventory of saleable items, we must attend many farm sales and dealer auctions on a regular basis," Wenger said

"This was always my father's job in the business."

In 1979, due to health reasons, his father decided to train someone in the company as his replacement, and Wenger was named to the position. Since January, 1980, he has served as the major equipment buyer for the firm

Gerald Strickler, Wenger's vo-ag instructor at Elco High School, feels that Wenger is a very conscientious person who is forever trying to do his best to satisfy his already large and growing list of customers.

"He is rapidly acquiring the ability of being able to spot a piece of quality equipment at the various sales in his travels," Strickler said

"He needs this skill if he is to bring in a return for the family business, while at the same time being able to satisfy his customers."

About 80 percent of the time, Wenger travels to areas of of the southern or midwestern sections of the country in a moment's notice for an important equipment auction He constantly utilizes air travel to get from sale to sale

Wenger's future occupational goals involve the continuous purchasing of new and used equipment for the family business.

Wenger has been active in the Elco FFA chapter and served as chapter secretary and president their support of vocational education in agriculture. Representative Paul Findley, Illinois, said the fundamental reason for growth in agricultural efficiency is this commitment to education. Robert D. Lund, Vice President of General Motors, spoke on behalf of the sponsors.

Secretary of Agriculture John Block also addressed the FFA leaders. He fielded questions from the officers concerning trends in ag policy changes, goals for the Department of Agriculture and the future of the family farm. Block challenged them to "go right on up the ladder of involvement in the agricultural industry from whatever vantage point possible."

At a special banquet during the State Presidents' Conference, the Woodlan FFA Chapter of Woodburn, Indiana, received the national President's Challenge award. This award recognizes outstanding energy conservation efforts by FFA chapters and is sponsored by Estech, Inc., Chicago, as a special project of the National FFA Foundation, Inc.

Regional winners included the James Wood Chapter of Winchester, Virginia; the Greene County Tech Chapter of Paragould, Arkansas; and the Stillwater Valley Chapter of Absarokee, Montana.

4-H'ers experience life in New England

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LANCASTER — Fresh red lobsters, juicy, squeezy cranberries, Plymouth Rock, pilgrims, quaint little fishing villages smelling of sea weed, and ocean roars became a way of life for 26 Lancaster County youths last week when they journeyed to Massachusetts as part of a 4-H exchange program.

From 11 clubs the 26 came, unpacking their goods in Plymouth and Bristol counties and traveling, 4 out of the 6 days planned, to sites throughout the state.

An entire day was devoted to famous Cape Cod, in Barnstable County, with highlights being a boat ride and an afternoon at the beach.

On Tuesday the travelers visited Plimoth Plantation in Plymouth, a bright part of the vacation according to Nancy Meyers, county agent and tour member, because "We were able to talk to the people who live at this plantation who live, act and talk as if they are Pilgrims It was really fun and very interesting because they would only eat what they could raise or grow, and they never leave the plantation They called us witches because we told them we travel on planes and buses" Meyers laughed

On Thursday, the now weary travelers took a jaunt to Boston on the "T," the city's subway system

Friday and Saturday was free time to spend with the host families, a must for this trip since the visitors plan to host their new friends from Massachusetts next summer

When asked to comment on the trip, Meyers said, "I think a lot of the kids enjoyed the historical aspects — this is where America started," she replied

"Massachusetts has a lot of 'firsts' to offer the traveler. They have the first concrete bridge ever built in the country in Plymouth and the first divided highway also This highway is very interesting because it is divided by trees instead of concrete," she explained.

This new Massachusetts fan went on to describe the state as "a real nice blend between green forests and blue ocean scenes"

An interesting aspect of the trip might be the fact that none of the host families were from farms, a switch for 4-H'ers from a county that is predominately agricultural.

"This was a new experience for the farm kids especially," Meyers said

And according to the travelers, the farm scenes were few and far between

"You don't see many large farm operations in southeastern Massachusetts – just a lot of cranberry bogs," Meyers explained She also noted that Massachusetts is a leader in the production of cranberries.

"We were able to see how they grow cranberries. They are grown in areas called bogs a little below the normal walking ground They have wet and dry harvesting methods. We saw both The wet keeps the cranberries wet and so these berries are used for sauces and such and the dry are used to be frozen," she said

"In the winter they flood the area with water and the kids can go ice skating on it The berries are on vines, so they never have to be replanted, but the farmers do have to spend their time with insects and water problems"

And every trip lends itself to a new experience — this one supplying a first in the consumption of "quahogs" for the curious 4-H'ers

Quahogs are a relative of the clam and we're assured they are delicious

Hopefully next year will be a fun learning experience for the Massachusetts visitors when they too journey to a lifestyle completely new to them This trip is one 26 youths will never forget

A first for many of this county's 4-H'ers was the subway system. Photos supplied by Nancy Meyers, county agent and trip member.

8 delegates named for AIC convention

UNIVERSITY PARK — Eight Pennsylvania young adults, who last week served as delegates to the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives Summer Youth Institute held at Shippensburg State College, have been named to attend the annual meeting of the American Institute of Cooperation at Colorado State University.

Those named are Glen Butters, fo R1, Morris; Andrew Rill, of R1, Newburg; Jay Clark, of R1, Enon Valley; and Lolly Long, of R3, Huntingdon. The four received scholarships from the Pennsylvania Association of Farmer Cooperatives.

Named recipients of Inter-State Milk Products Cooperative scholarships are Gerald Garber, of R2, Willow Street; Nancy Yarnall, of R1, Oxford; Robert Livingston, of 5441 Davidsburg Road, Dover; and Brett Holzhauer, of R1, Holtwood.

Their selections climaxed the four-day institute in which 150 rural boys and girls from four states participated in PAFC's youth education program

Dr. William Lindley, youth programs specialist at The Pennsylvania State University and institute program chairman, points out that the eight were chosen on the basis of a report covering local activities, a quiz on cooperative business functions, and participation in events at the institute.

At Colorado State University, the delegates will take part in various programs to increase their knowledge of farmer cooperatives and agribusiness. They will join with 900 young agricultural leaders from all parts of the United States, Canada, and Puerto Rico.

The PAFC youth institute was sponsored jointly by PAFC, local cooperative councils, and the Penn State College of Agriculture.

Water testing fee increases

HARRISBURG — The Pennsylvania Department of Environmental Resources reminds state residents that the fee for testing drinking water samples will be increased to $10, effective Aug. 3.

The increase is mandated by Act 48 passed by the legislature in June and signed July 1. The act, which amends the Administrative Code, provides for the fixing of fees charged by state administrative agencies.

According to Floyd D. Kefford, director of DER's Bureau of Laboratories, the fee covers the costs of a sampling kit, laboratory analysis of the water for total coliform bacteria, and delivery of the sample from the county in which it was taken to one of two DER laboratories, in Harrisburg and Erie.

Kefford said the fee for the testing had been $1 since 1959.

"The increased charge is closer to the actual cost of the service," he explained, "and is more consistent with the fee charged by commercial laboratories for the same type of analysis."

LANCASTER — You've just had one of those days.

The morning milking was a disaster. The cows just didn't want to come back into the stuffy, hot barn. They'd rather have stayed under the big tree along the stream in the meadow.

But finally it was done.

The hauler is late for the milk pickup. And when he finally comes his figures only prove what you've suspected. Production is down

Must be the heat. After all, it's the dog days of summer.

You walk out into the field down behind the barn to check the hay you cut. It's just right. Doesn't take long in this kind of weather to dry.

You hook up the baler and start to pull in the field. Then, a strange noise echoes from the baler's interior.

Well, it means another trip to the equipment dealer. But wait, you're wife just borrowed the pickup and your son took the car to school because he has an FFA show afterward.

By the time you get to bale it, the air will be filled with bits and pieces that were once alfalfa leaves.

You check on the big cow that's overdue. Better call the vet.

And it goes on and on.

The sun beats down and the humidity makes you soaking wet sweated in a couple of minutes. Not a hint of a breeze is stirring.

And finally it's evening milking. You walk into the barn and look down the long row of black and white and what do you see?

You see what Wayne L. Arnacast, of Hickory Hill Farm, Upperco, Md., sent in as a photo in the recent Dairy Month Contest.

After a day like this, it's a good thing to keep in mind.

Now, if only the sticky heat would break

It won't help break the heat, but the other accompanying photo submitted by Mrs. Patricia S. Hurline, 5301 Patterson Road, Baldwin, Md., might give a little fleeting relief.

That snow-covered pasture looks real inviting.

So, here are a couple of dairy photos to help lighten a hot day.—DA

County youth gather for conservation school

BY DEBBIE KOONTZ

LITITZ — To spend a week in the great outdoors eating roast venison and sharing the land with ducks, deer, and foresters may be some people's way of escaping it all, but to over 30 youths who gathered for the Lancaster County Conservation School, it was a week full of learning survival, orienteering, fishing, biology and the list continues

Borrowing tents and cots from the National Guard, the students braved mosquitoes and snakes to spend a week under the direction of Tom Johnston, county soil conservationist, and Sonia Shaner, vo-ag instructor at Warwick.

Their activities which began Sunday last week, included instruction in survival by Carl Graybill of the PA Game Commission and orienteering by Bob Lautter, vo-ag instructor at New Holland, fishing school by Bob Good and Ray Rudy from Sportman's Club in Lititz, forestry by John Bearer and Tim Breneisen, foresters for the State Bureau of Forestry and the County Conservation District, respectively; solar energy by Sandy Coyman; and aquatic biology by Stan Paulakovich, southeast supervisor for the PA Fish Commission.

Though the students camped at the northern Lancaster County's Fish and Game Association's 130 acre game farm, they did have opportunity to leave the spot for several classes. These classes included duck banding at Middle Creek by Ted Fox, game commissioner, and a trip to Hammer Creek to learn stream improvement by Ron Tibbet from the Fish Commission.

Tom Johnston, co-director of the school, described the week as "an opportunity to promote conservation in our youth and a chance to give them an idea of careers in conservation."

"I think the students all enjoyed the week and profited from it. I had them all fill out an evaluation form and each said on it that they would like to return next year as a junior counselor," Johnston said.

This marks the third year the school has been held and each year the enrollment has improved. The

Medfly will not affect food supply, USDA says

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Consumers should not see any increase in supermarket prices, or any decrease in fruit and vegetable supplies or quality due to the current Mediterranean fruit fly outbreak in California, a U.S Department of Agriculture administrator said recently.

Harry C. Mussman, administrator of USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, said USDA officials are concerned about apparent consumer confusion over the extent and market-level affect of the Medfly quarantine and eradication program.

"Consumers in a few areas are refusing to buy California fruit and vegetables, while in other areas, consumers are stockpiling," Mussman said. "And, there is great confusion over which fruits and vegetables are susceptable to attack by the pest."

According to Mussman, California's commercially grown fruit and vegetables are of the same high quality as always, free of the pest, not being treated, and being shipped to out of state markets in the usual high volume. Once the product appears in the supermarket there is no Medfly problem with it.

Youth attend school

school is open to youths 14 to 16 year old.

Johnston also pointed out that if the learning and great outdoors weren't the selling point of the week, then the food would be. Menu selections included such delicacies as roast venison and pantish, fried and smoked After all, if you're studying the outdoors, you may as well get as close to nature as possible

DE LAVAL®

Challenger™ Feeding System

This is the breakthrough technology that made it possible to feed grain to dairy cows according to individual needs—automatically. The De Laval® Challenger™ Feeding System is the obvious choice for dairy farmers who want electronic grain dispensing at a moderate installation cost.

The Challenger system is controlled by neck-worn transponders which store feeding instructions for each cow; these provide a radio link with feeding stalls where cows are fed upon command. The Challenger system has capabilities demanded by the most modern operation, yet it's feasible for herds as small as 25 cows. May we show the surprising figures?

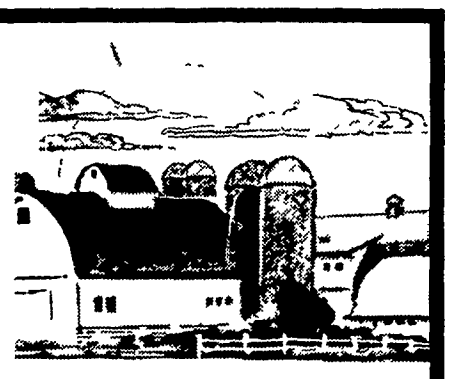
Have You Purchased Your SILAGE and HIGH MOISTURE CORN ADDITIVES or PRESERVATIVES For The coming Season?



With the large selection of products available to you today, deciding which way to turn brings important questions to be answered ..

? ? The Questions ? ?

1 WHAT AM I GOING TO USE ON MY SILAGE THIS YEAR?
A An Enzyme Based Product?
B A Yeast Preparation?
C A Urea Product?
D A Molasses Based Product?
E A Cultured Additive?

2 WHAT WILL TOTAL COST OF THE PREPARATION BE?
A Cost Per Ton!
B Coverage Per Ton!
C Total Return Vs Dollar Investment!

3 HOW WILL I APPLY THE PRODUCT I CHOOSE?
A Easy Application!
B Requires Special Aplicator!
C Must Be Applied By Hand!

Now Let us give you answers to the above questions in relationship to our product ALFA-ZYME!

!! The Answers !!

1 ALFA ZYME is a fermented enzyme product injected onto a fine grade alfalfa (a top grade carrier of enzymes) We have the ORIGINAL ENZYMES PRODUCT!

2 The COST of ALFA ZYME Vs return for your dollar is fantastic While other products use minimal lbs per ton ALFA ZYME requires 50 Lbs for every 3 tons of silage or high moisture corn A 120 ton silo takes 40 bags or 1 tone of ALFA ZYME

3 We realize we might not have the easiest product to apply but after application we have that "SOME THING SPECIAL' that makes better silage and corn! (No we don t have an 'easy applicator" but then again if your results are hot satisfactory with 'easily applied' products all you end up with is a useless 'easy applicator!')

We hope the above information has captured your attention Now we have a few questions of our own

1 Do you realize the product you choose will determine the outcome of your silage up to the next filling season? You can change your feeding program often, but the product you apply to your silage or corn must work the coming winter, spring and summer months!

2 Have you already purchased a product because of an early discount or "special deal"? If so, try this test fill ½ your silo with the other product and then add ALFA-ZYME to the remainder Make 1981 the year you make the test!

IN SUMMARY...

Making BETTER SILAGE and HIGHER MOISTURE CORN is our main business. And, ALFA-ZYME has been proven on farms like yours in PA, MD, VA, and W VA

NOW...THE FINAL QUESTION!...
Where can I purchase ALFA-ZYME?...Ask your feed dealer, farm store operator, call or write:

HEIFERS — BULLS

4-H'ers clown around

LEBANON — For the past three Saturdays, seven Lebanon 4-H'ers learned how to "clown around."

The new members were taught the difference parts of clowning, including make-up, costumes, balloon animals and skits, by Mial Hillhouse, a member of the Professional Clown's Club of America, from Manheim.

"Milo," as he is known in the clown circle, began by showing how he becomes a clown and ended with a "clown revue" where each new member displayed his new clown image.

"The 4-H clown club will be more than an entertainment group," says Gwen Bowman, 4-H Program Assistant. "It will provide the member with a chance to do things behind a mask, helping to strengthen his self-confidence. Many individuals overcome shyness, get a chance to meet different kinds of people, develop interpersonal communication skills and learn to perform in front of strangers."

The 4-H clowns will be conducting regular monthly meetings, where they will practice the skills Milo taught them. They also plan to perform skits at preschools, visit retirement homes and take field trips to such places as The Magic Shop.

Simmental youths receive special awards

BOZEMAN, Mt. — Nine outstanding junior members of the American Simmental Association have been named as the initial recipients of the newly instituted ASA Merit Awards.

Established by the ASA Trustees, the Merit Awards are designed to provide recognition to junior members who have made "significant contributions to their community, home, school, family, and the Simmental breed."

The nine award winners are as follows: Robert S. Alger II, 19, Broadway, Vir.; Pam Dicken, 19, Newton, Kan.; Wendy A. Feik, 21, Le Moille, Ill.; Jerry L. Hill, 17, Tuttle, Ok.; Thomas E. Hook, 19, Tracy, Minn.; Christopher C. Ragland, 18, Magnolia, Ky.; Tracy Risinger, 19, San Antonio, Tex.; Patricia Ann Ten-Eyck, 17, Sandy, Ore.; Jan Elinor Unger, 17, Carlisle, Ind.

The award includes a $500 grant to be used by the recipient for post-secondary education purposes.

The nine winners were named from among more than 60 applicants.

"The decision was not an easy one," said Earl B. Peterson, ASA Executive Vice President. "We had numerous highly qualified candidates and the screening committee had a rugged task in settling on the eventual award winners."

Peterson encouraged unsuccessful applicants to apply again next year.

"If the enthusiam shown during the first year of the Merit Award program is any indication, it would appear that it will be a most popular part of our Youth and Education Program", he said.

Former dairy princess promotes in Ohio

BY JANE BRESEE
Staff Correspondent

ULSTER — Miss Penny Allen, 1979 Bradford County Dairy Princess, recently flew to Mt. Vernon, Ohio, to speak at a Buckeye Dairy Boosters training session for newly crowned Ohio County dairy princesses.

Penny took the trip at the invitation of Pearle Burlingame of North Luma, Ohio, a member of the Buckeye Dairy Boosters, who says she had read an article about Penny's success as a Pennsylvania dairy princess in Lancaster Farming.

Penny hesitated at first to accept the invitation because she was in the middle of taking finals after completing her first year of nurses training at the Arnot Ogden Hospital in Elmira, New York, But, at the urging of her father who told her she would be helping the dairy industry, she and her mother, Mrs. Charles Allen, hired a private plane piloted by Robert Jenkins from Towanda Aviation, and made the two hour trip out and back the same day.

Enthusiasm was the main thrust of Penny's hour-long presentation.

"If you can get the spirit going and the home town behind you, everything else goes along with it," Penny told the girls. She also explained how to make radio tapes, supermarket promotions, how to dress, and offered many other tips on how to be a successful dairy princess.

Penny also took with her a video-audio tape of the Bradford County Dairy Princess Pageant obtained through the cooperation of the Troy Area High School.

Penny was made an honorary member of the Buckeye Dairy Boosters, and was presented with a t-shirt bearing that name.

The Buckeye Dairy Boosters is a new organization formed by farm women to promote the sale of milk. Since the American Dairy Association (ADA) stopped sponsoring the National Dairy Princess Program years ago, the entire dairy princess program was dropped in Ohio. Realizing the need for such promotion in their state, a nucleus of farm wives are taking the initiative to organize the counties for a state-wide Dairy Princess Program. Obtaining Penny Allen to speak to the new princesses and spark the effort was one of their first endeavors.

"Promoting milk will always be dear to my heart," Penny said. "But for now, my goal is getting through nurses training."

Penny and her mother were instrumental in upgrading the achievements of the dairy princess in Bradford County and have been a great help to Luann Shedden, 1980 princess, and the present reigning princess, Jean Sheeley.

Penny Allen, 1979 Bradford County Dairy Princess readies for the two hour trip to Ohio to speak to Ohio dairy princesses. With her is pilot Bob Jenkins.

His senior yearling, Spindle, was selected as the Swiss Junior Champion.

The Junior Champion award went to Bruce Rhein for his Junior Yearling, Lovergirl. Karl Hettner showed the Reserve Junior Champion, an intermediate calf named Peaches.

A special award was given to Kristin Hettner, R2, Pine Grove, for submitting the winning drawing in the show book cover design contest. Honorable mention awards went to Nelson Moyer, RJ, Schuylkill Haven, and to Karin Hettner, R2, Pine Grove.

The Senior Showmanship Trophy went to Kent Hettner while Karin Hettner captured the Junior Division award.

Tracy Snyder won the senior division of the fitting competition and Robert Reed won the junior division.

The county 4-H dairy show winners will quality to go on to compete in the Southeast District 4-H Dairy Show to be held September 1, at the Allentown Fair.

Fair features Arabian horses

GAITHERSBURG, Md. — The Montgomery County fair will feature an Arabian Horse Show at the fairground near Gaithersburg on Sunday, August 23, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The show will consist of 45 classes — 22 breeding classes and 23 performance classes (Western, English, Park, Trail, Equitation, Driving and Native Costumes).

Exhibitors are eligible for Legion Merit Points, National Championship Classes and Blue Ridge High Point Awards.

The following prize monies will be awarded for the winner in each class: $750 for Purebred; $500 for Halfbred; and $300 for Junior Division. Contestants will also compete in special Costume Classes.

The Arabian horse is the oldest registered breed of horses, says Anne Sturm, Show Secretary.

"Arabians are beautiful animals noted for their intelligence, physical endurance, gentleness and great versatility."

Cuts evenly

Another reason why all ring-drive silo unloaders are not alike: Wide-stance hexapod 3-point suspension features big 6-inch pulleys and 5/10-inch steel cables to assure proper balance, less stress. Machine can't tip or tilt; cuts level, from top to bottom. Can be installed in empty, partly empty or full silo.

BEAT THE SUMMER HEAT...

SPRINKLER COOLING SYSTEM
(Not Fogger)

FOR HOGS

THE PROBLEM

When the temperature goes up one of the first ways your body reacts is by breaking out in perspiration That's nature s way of cooling off

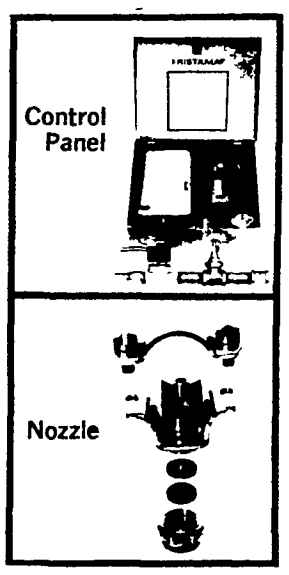
It s different with hogs High temperatures cause them a great deal of stress because they can't sweat When under this stress due to heat hogs will lose their appetite weight gains drop there is poor feed conversion conception rate is reduced and pens become a mess All of this adds up to lost profits

THE SOLUTION:

When the temperature is above 72° F even ventilation can't cure the stress that results But a sprinkler cooling system can help your hogs where nature fell short giving them a chance to cool off It sprays them with coarse water droplets to reduce their body temperature The idea is simple but extremely effective

THE SYSTEM:

The sprinkle cycle is turned on automatically whenever the barn temperature rises above a preset level 72° F Throughout this 'on' period the control functions to permit sprinkling to occur for a preset time period each hour (2 minutes/hour is recommended for best results) When the barn temperature drops below 72° F the cycle is automatically interrupted



The nozzles are clamped to a plastic pipe strung over the gutter of slatted area at the rear of the pen Each nozzel covers a 5 6 foot diameter area which usually means one nozzle per pen The nozzle assures a coarse droplet spray pattern which is important for maximum cooling A fine mist of fog is not desirable in geographical areas of generally high summer relative humidity

THE PROOF:

	Control Hogs not sprayed	Hogs Sprayed 1 min per hr above 85°F	Hogs Sprayed 1 min per hr above 70°F	Hogs Sprayed 1 min per hr above 70°F

Harvester for greens may save time, labor

KEARNEYSVILLE, WV - Eating greens may be a special treat, but harvesting them is backbreaking work. So a trio of U.S. Department of Agriculture and State engineers are developing a mechanical harvester to revive a dying industry.

"Fresh market greens are on the decline because they have to be hand-harvested, and workers are difficult to find," says Donald L. Peterson who is with USDA's Agricultural Research Service at Kearneysville, WV

While stationed at East Lansing, MI, Peterson and two colleagues designed, built and field-tested the first prototype harvester which gathers and cuts the leaves and conveys them through an inspection area where discolored leaves and weeds are removed by hand, then on to a mechanism which bunches and ties the leaves automatically.

The harvester was rear-mounted to a 60-horsepower tractor that has hydrostatic drive in order to maintain a precise ground speed. Peterson's collaborators were ARS engineer G.K. Brown, located at Michigan State University, and A.K. Srivastava, assistant professor of agricultural engineering at Michigan State University.

The harvester performed well for turnip and mustard greens which had been drill-planted, but did not satisfactorily gather collards which were grown as widely spaced individual plants. It produced bunches that were more uniform in size than hand-harvested greens and equal in quality.

The prototype harvester and its crew of three turned out 18 cartons (432 bunches) of mustard greens per hour and 28 cartons (672 bunches) of turnip greens per hour-rates that are only slightly better, on a worker-hour basis, than hand-harvesting. However, this test model was designed for single rows. A multiple-row harvester could increase worker productivity, says Peterson. He points out that the engineering involved in converting his prototype into a multiple-row harvester should be relatively simple. Productivity could also be improved by 30 to 50 percent if there is good weed control, and the greens are of more uniform height, he added. Hand-harvesting currently accounts for 10 to 25 percent of the sale price of leafy green vegetables.

Peterson estimates it will be 2 to 3 years before the prototype harvester is ready for commercial use. Brown and Srivastava are continuing its development and are trying to adapt it to a large variety of leafy greens, including root crops that are sold with their leafy tops, such as beets, bunching onions, turnips and possibly carrots.

$55 million available to Poland

WASHINGTON — The United States will make $55 million available to Poland in response to that country's urgent need for corn, Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block said today.

Funds will be provided through an allocation under Title I of Public Law 480 (Food for Peace), and will supplement previous short-term financing made available under the Commodity Credit Corporation's GSM-102 export payment guarantee program. Commodities to be financed under the P.L. 480 allocation will be purchased for August and September delivery, Block said.

CCC last September allocated $670 million in credit guarantees to Poland to enable it to obtain commercial financing to buy American agricultural commodities in fiscal 1981. Poland has now used about $652 million of that allocation.

Title I of Public Law 480 allows receiving nations to buy U.S. agricultural products for dollars, but on credit terms more favorable than normal commercial transactions. The total P.L. 480 financing period for Poland will be 10 years.

USSR resumes U.S. grain purchases

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block said today he is "extremely pleased that the Soviet Union has returned to the U.S. market for corn — the first Soviet purchase of U.S. grain since President Reagan lifted the embargo April 24."

Private exporters reported sales of 450,000 tons of U.S. corn for delivery after September 30.

"These purchases are consistent with the U.S.-USSR consulation held in London June 8-9, when it was agreed that the Soviets could make additional purchases under the existing long-term agreement both before and after the agreement expires September 30.

"The United States has worked hard to develop the Soviet market, as well as to expand farm product sales in other parts of the world," Block said. "American farmers have invested their own labor and capital in producing for export. It is right and fair that they have the opportunity to compete for those markets, including the Soviet Union, and to benefit in terms of income. The resumption of grain sales to the USSR is most gratifying. This gives me reason to be very optimistic that the door has been opened on additional grain sales."

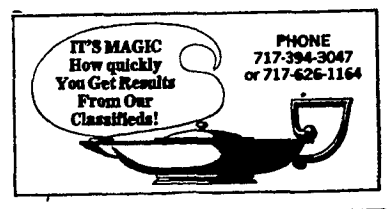
The present five-year agreement, which became effective October 1, 1976, provided for purchases by the USSR of a minimum of 6 million tons of U.S. corn and wheat each year, with purchases above 8 million tons requiring prior consultation between the two governments. The Soviets bought 6.1 million tons the first year of the agreement, 14.6 million tons in the second year, and 15.5 million tons in the third year.

In October 1979, after a short crop in the USSR, the Soviets were told they could import 25 million tons of U.S. grain the subsequent 12 months. However, on January 4, 1980, President Jimmy Carter announced an embargo on the export of agricultural products and certain other items to the USSR, except that the United States promised to honor the existing 6-8 million tons commitment on corn and wheat. As a result, shipments in the fourth year of the agreement amounted to only 7.9 million tons.

By April of this year, the Soviets had completed purchases and shipments of the 8 million tons permitted in the fifth and final year of the agreement. Without further consultations between the governments, no additional purchases would have been permitted under the agreement.

However, at the June 8-9 consultation in London this year, the United States agreed the Soviets could purchase without further consultation up to 3 million tons of U.S. corn and 3 million tons of U.S. wheat for delivery before October 1.

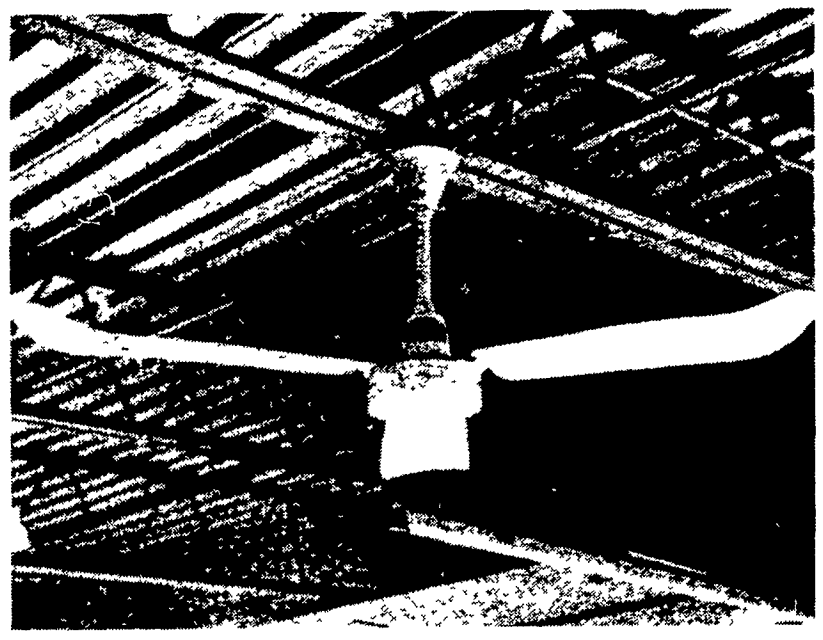
It was also agreed that the USSR could proceed to purchase "reasonable quantities" for delivery on or after October 1. The understanding is that if these purchases approach 3 million tons of wheat and/or 3 million tons of corn, the United States will communicate further with Soviet authorities.



AGRI-FAN

HELPS TO HEAT IN WINTER!

HELPS TO COOL IN SUMMER!



Agri-fan continuously circulates air vertically, eliminating heat stratification which can cause air temperatures from floor to ceiling to differ by as much as 25 degrees.

Agri-fan forces warm, dry air (which naturally rises), down to floor level in a continuing circular process.

When the overall temperature in a building is equalized the thermostat can be lowered in the cold winter months and fuel costs can drop as much as 30%. In hot summer months, Agri-fan prevents uncomfortable air stagnation, providing dryer, cooler, healthier conditions, thereby reducing your operation costs even further.

It's a 'Remember How' Saturday at Centre

CENTRE — It was a "Remember How" Saturday.

Remember how schools used to be financed before the days of an administrative hierarchy running each large consolidated district by taking annual larger and larger bites out of the pockets of property owners.

That earlier method of educational financing was in the days when a mill was a place a farmer went voluntarily to get his grain ground into flour and the like.

Now, a mil – with only one "l"– is an annual involuntary trip of another sort when farmers and other property owners don't go to a grinding, but more appropriately to a cleaning.

But remember how it once was different.

Parents got together to give of their time and effort to finance the education of their children. And that was also back in the days when parents didn't renege on the dual responsibility of education that combined both continuing effort in the home and the school.

Well, it's still done in that old way in at least one area of Pennsylvania, as shown in the accompanying photos taken at a "Remember How" Saturday amidst the rolling farmland near Centre, a small rural village between Thompsontown and Mifflintown, north of Harrisburg.

The occasion was the annual Amish Parochial School Benefit Sale for the one-room school serving the Amish farm children of the area.

It's an area of shocked grain, windmills and shorter silos – one that time has kinda passed by. And with the new Rt. 322, that rolls the modern traffic by at a greater distance, it has remained even more unspoiled by so-called progress.

It must have been the way Eastern Lancaster County looked before receiving the strangling double squeeze of commercialism and development.

But back to the "Remember How" Saturday.

Remember how quilts used to be made. Carefully sewed over the long winter months with tiny

Cooling dusty, tired tootsies at the school house pump.

Auctioneer implores audience for another quilt bid.

Quilts hang in school house for inspection prior to sale. Some 30 bed quilts and smaller crib types sold for prices ranging up to $575.

All ages attend annual one-room school benefit sale.

Horses, buggies, cars and trucks fill a hillside pasture for annual benefit sale to support one-room Amish school house at Centre in Juniata County. In background are just visible the school and large tent in which the day-long sale was held.

SURGE OUTPERFORMS ITSELF...AGAIN.

Introducing the best lightweight, high capacity milker Surge ever designed. A full pound lighter than our popular Mini-Cup II, yet its 39 cubic inches give it more capacity than any other claw-type milker.

The new Mini-Orbit is also easier to carry, easier to attach and remove. Fits right in your hand.

Visibility's better, too. And larger, repositioned nipples coupled with larger stem inflations, proper balance and low center of gravity assure faster, more equal milking action.

We can make your cows worth more.

Remember How

evenly spaced stitches that were as much a signature of the maker as her hand writing.

Dozens of such quilts were in evidence on Saturday and each of the precision stitches not only helped form an attractive pattern, but they also helped in the educational shaping of youthful minds as funds from their sale went toward the school program.

Remember how ice cream used to taste. Rich and creamily coarse with little bits of ice particles still sprinkled through it. And just the basic honest flavors of vanilla, chocolate and real fruit. None of those fancy flavors like Rocky Road or Peanut Butter Cup, which substitute high-class nomenclature for good old-fashioned flavor.

Remember how ice cream used to be dipped out of the metal cannister in which it was churned. No struggling to open those bright, gaily decorated cardboard containers, which always tear and manage to give an artificial paper taste to the contents.

Remember how big hoagies used to be before they shrank into hot dog rolls.

Remember how these two-hand hoagies used to cost a buck apiece

Remember how bright and red the tomatoes on top used to be. Tomatoes just picked from the vine that morning. Instead of those pale, sickly pink imitations seen too much these days – the kind that just don't ripen in cellophane on the supermarket shelf.

Remember how huge a slice of pie once was – its tasty contents just spilling over the large plate. Now most pie comes in slices that barely fill a paper plate once used to hold a cookie.

Remember how soup used to be so thick that you could make a meal of it. Today, too much of it is the Campbell variety in which a spent hen bought for a few cents a pound makes a few thousand cans of so-called chicken soup.

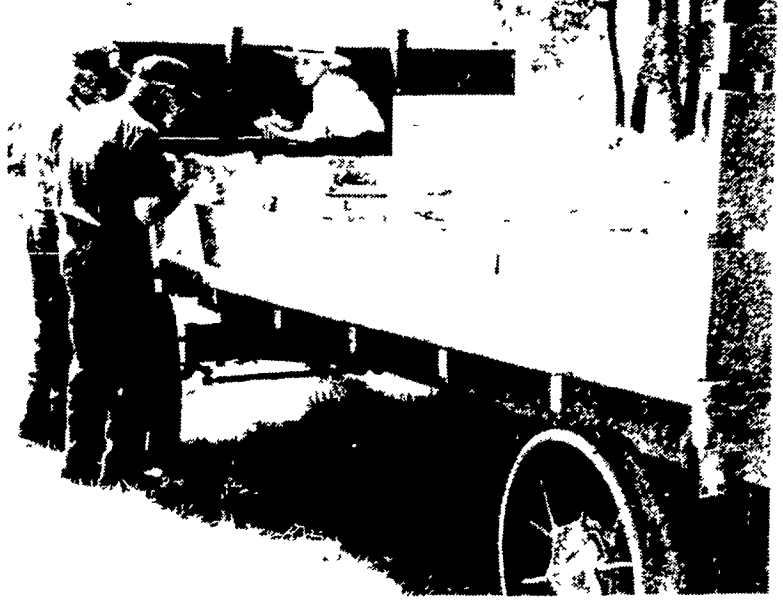
Remember how kids used to get great fun out of simple pleasures. Instead of illegally opening a fire hydrant for a little mid-summer relief, cranking the pump to let the cold well water trickle over the dust-caked toes.

Remember how patriarchs and matriarchs sat and talked together and reminisced instead of wasting waning years in front of a TV in a drab, lonely room.

I remember and appreciate these "Remember Hows." And this past weekend I was lucky enough to relive a "Remember How" Saturday.

Do you remember how?

Youngsters pause for a cooling drink.



While "shop keeper" munches a hoagie, a couple of customers shop the farm wagon produce section of this outdoor supermarket.

To analyze feed conversion

USDA nutritionists put beef under glass

BELTSVILLE, Md. — Cattle inside glass isolation chambers are providing new information about how beef cattle of different body types utilize their food, said Gordon Haaland, a research nutritionist with USDA's Agricultural Research Service.

At the recent meeting of the American Society of Animal Science, Haaland reported on four Angus and four Holstein steers kept in air-conditioned chambers for up to fourteen days. Their body functions are electronically measured and their feed rations strictly monitored.

Haaland fed Angus and Holstein steers, weighing 992-1,257 pounds, diets containing either 12 or 15 percent crude protein. He found Angus steers retained more energy in the form of body tissue than Holstein steers. The requirement for maintenance of body weight by Angus steers was lower than that for Holstein steers. Most of the difference was due to increased fat retention by Angus steers.

Digestibility of the feed and its ability to be metabolized, or converted into useful energy, were not affected by the breed of steers consuming it. However, steers on the higher protein diet converted less calories to body tissue and had increased calorie loss through the urine. The digestibility of the feed and the percent of feed metabolized decreased as the animals ate more feed, Haaland said.

Haaland explained the steers were fed a cracked-corn-based concentrate and corn silage supplemented with soybean meal to bring the protein content to either 12 or 15 percent. These rations were fed at body maintenance (amount of energy intake to maintain body weight) or free choice

These animals had previously been studied at an earlier stage of maturity, weighing 496-771 pounds, using the same feeding regimen. At that time the digestibility of the feed was increased among Hosltein steers when protein content was increased from 12 to 15 percent. By contrast, among Angus steers, increasing the protein content by the same amount did not increase its digestibility.

However, in the present study, digestibility did not increase for either breed as the protein content of the feed was increased. Haaland attributes this to the fact that at this later maturity level the Holstein steers did not convert their energy intake to lean meat as they had done earlier. He commented this further demonstrates the need to relate feeding schedules to conformation and maturity of beef cattle

Haaland said that, in these experiments, the steer is considered as a factory that both uses and stores energy. Food (energy) is the raw material used by this factory to produce protein or fat (both represent tissue energy). Excretion in various forms — respiratory products, urine, feces, methane gas, and heat produced by steers — are all forms of energy which are the waste products of this factory.

He said measurement of energy utilized, lost and retained is an efficient way of determining how a steer utilizes its energy intake. It is far more reliable, he said, than measuring weight gain, which does not differentiate between meat, bone, and liquid weight.

Henry Tyrrell, a colleague of Haaland at the Ruminant Nutrition Laboratory in Beltsville, Md., said the information gained in these experiments will help cattle producers formulate more economical feeding schedules to produce cattle of a desired weight and grade.

Conservationist urges cover cropping

LEBANON — A mid-August seeding of winter rye will reduce soil loss from cornfields over winter, says Clair Gerberich, manager, Lebanon County Conservation District.

Winter rye grain aerial seeded over standing corn during middle to late August should produce a nearly solid green cover within a few weeks. This will help retain topsoil over winter and give good support to harvesting equipment. In addition this winter rye produces a large fibrous root system that will improve soil tilth. Next spring the rye can be controlled with herbicide and corn can be no-till planted into this cover.

Without a good cover crop on the bare soil over winter severe erosion can occur, notes Gerberich. Annual topsoil losses of 10 to 12 tons per acre are common. Conservationists estimate the value of this top soil loss which includes fertilizer, lime, herbicides, and pesticides can run as high as $75 per acre per year.

York horse show opens park

The under 13 hands division of the trail competition was Tricia White and her horse, "Buckwheat", Tricia, 13, was another winner of the Gailey Memorial trophy.

The 'brush box' proves to be no obstacle to Dee Dee Capuano, 15, of trailblazers. Dee Dee who took second place with her horse "Charlie Mi Boy" in Hunter Seat Equitation overjump has been riding for a number of years.

The junior division grooming and showmanship winner, Wendi Wolf watches her horse "Precious" display the ribbon they won in their third year of showing competition.

Taking first place in the over 13 hands division of the open trail class to win the Herman Gailey Memorial award is Kris Ritchey of the Wellsville Club. Kris put her Horse "Society's Fink" through its obstacles to win the coveted award.

BY LAURIE DOBROSKY

GLEN ROCK — About 100 York County 4-H horse and pony club members helped to open the new horse show ring at Spring Valley Park here on Saturday during their annual county roundup.

Starting off the day of competition were the classes in grooming and showmanship. Each member in the junior and senior divisions paraded before the judge and were scored on the apperance of their animal and their showmanship ability.

The senior division honors were captured by Linda Eberly of the White Rose Club, riding her Paint "Remarkable Chance." Linda, 15, who has only been riding horses for 3 years, recently acquired enough showmanship points to win the youth versatility award from the National Paint Horse Association.

Another Paint came out on top in the junior showmanship division. "Precious", owned by Wendi Wolf of the Trailblazers Club, placed first over the 22 other contestants. Wendy, who is 14, has been showing horses for a number of years, not only in 4-H shows but also in various Paint shows across the country.

One of the most prestigious honors awarded at the county roundup is the Herman Gailey Memorial Trophy, presented for the second year to the outstanding riders in the trail competition. The trophies are presented in memory of Dr. Gailey, a judge and promoter of the 4-H horse program in York County who died two years ago on the day he was to judge the trail class for the county roundup.

In the under-13-hands division, Tricia White of the Trailblazers club took first place with her horse "Buckwheat." In the over-13-hands division, Kris Ritchey of the Wellsville club took the championship on her horse, "Society's Fink."

Greg Bailey was the judge for the trail class. Other judges for the annual event included: Mrs. Helen Spedden, English; and Robert Spedden, Western.

The three individuals judged as best in their respective classes will represent York County at District competition to be held on September 12 at Lower Hopewell Horse Farm, Lancaster. The exception will be in pleasure pairs class and the county team-class which will have two and one entries representing the county, respectively.

The results from the 30 class county roundup are:

Farm Talk

Jerry Webb

Too few for comfort

Farms are getting larger and fewer. So are the firms that supply them and the firms that buy what those farms produce.

A few weeks back I wrote about problems in the meat packing industry, with a handful of firms controlling most of the market for beef cattle in some parts of the country. That trend is affecting other farm markets.

It's especially evident on the Delmarva peninsula, where a system of integrated broiler production dominates the area's multi-million dollar broiler industry. There isn't one flock of broiler chickens grown on the peninsula that isn't involved in this complex system that's controlled by a handful of companies.

And that's in contrast to 30 years ago when any farmer who wanted to grow a flock of broilers and either sold them through the poultry auction at Selbyville or directly to one of the many poultry processors operating in the area at that time.

But changes in the industry over the past couple of decades have ended all that. Now farmers who want to grow broilers must first get contracts with one of those broiler firms. Then they're told how many broilers they can grow and what they will be paid for their efforts. In fact, the farmers don't even own the chickens during their short visit on the farms.

That's part of the integrated system. The baby chicks are hatched in the company hatchery, delivered to the farm in company trucks, fed company feed, and are gathered up by company chicken catchers and processed in company plants.

The same thing is happening on the supply side of farming, with fewer and fewer firms controlling those things that farmers need. A few large companies produce virtually all of the farm machinery. A handful of companies control the various forms of energy that farmers must rely on. Chemicals, so essential to modern agriculture, are produced and sold by fewer and fewer firms each year.

Farm pesticides are a prime example. Only a few companies account for the lion's share of the farm pesticide business. In 1966, the top four firms in the farm pesticide industry accounted for one-third of total farm pesticide purchases. But 10 years later, the top four accounted for two-thirds of the market.

Two factors are accounting for most of this increased concentration, according to a U.S. Department of Agriculture economist. Ted Eichers says rising research and development costs and increased government regulations make it virtually impossible for the small companies to hang on. And it's not easy for the big companies either. The costs of developing new pesticides and getting and keeping label clearance is astronomical.

Consider this: In the last decade the number of chemical compounds that companies tested to find marketable pesticides rose from an average of 6,500 annually in 1970 to 84,000 in 1978. During that same period, the average number of new pesticides actually registered for use fell from 10 to only 2 per year.

Here's another figure: In the late 1960's the 30 leading pesticide manufacturers were spending a total of about 60 million dollars a year on research and development. By the late 1970's that figure had increased to 290 million dollars.

What this means, according to Eichers, is that well established companies with marketable pesticides can continue to make money while going through the agonizing process of developing new pesticides. But it's virtually

U. of Md. researchers to study alternate fuels

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Four University of Maryland research scientists have been awarded a two-year grant to study the economic and technical feasibility of using vegetable oil as an alternative fuel source.

Oils such as those squeezed from peanuts, soybeans, sunflowers, rape seed and winter wheat could be used to "extend" diesel fuel now used in agriculture, according to Larry E. Stewart, chairman of the University's Department of Agricultural Engineering.

The combination of oils and diesel fuel would work in much the same manner as the current combination of corn alcohol and gasoline to produce "gasohol," he said.

The four scientists, working under the University's Agricultural Experiment Station, and their particular endeavors in the research project include:

- Ali Farsaie, Department of Agricultural Engineering, who will study oil squeezing equipment as well as conduct engine tests with oil-diesel combinations;
- William Wiebold, Department of Agronomy, who will study various crop combinations of peanuts, soybeans, sunflower, rape seed and winter wheat to determine which combinations produce the most oil and which grade of vegetable oil is best suited for diesel fuel;
- William Lessley, Department of Agricultural and Resource Economics, who will study the economic and energy feasibility of vegetable oils and diesel fuels; and,
- Jerry V. DeBarthe, Department of Animal Science, who will study possible uses of by-products from the oil production process as swine and sheep feed supplements.

"Potentially, the use of vegetable oils with diesel fuel or in place of diesel fuel looks very promising," said Stewart.

In 1978, 53 percent of all farm tractors in the nation used diesel fuels, consuming 3.3 billion gallons, he said.

By 1990, 88 percent of all farm tractors are expected to be diesel-powered, he said.

The research grant, awarded by the U.S. Department of Agriculture, is for $135,187 and was sought competitively by a host of other major universities and private industry.

impossible for small companies and new companies to get a piece of the action. He says this means that in the future there will be more market concentration and fewer firms devoting larger expenditures to new pesticide development

So far, the USDA economist believes this process has not worked to the disadvantage of farmers. In fact, it may have actually helped them. Strong competition and oversupply during the past decade meant pesticide prices actually increased less than other farm inputs

But Eichers says he thinks that favorable situation may end A few firms could find it much easier to regulate the amount of pesticides made available each year and in so doing have a lot more to say about the cost of farm chemicals

Eichers adds he believes the long-range effect of the concentration of pesticide manufacturing could have good and bad effects on agriculture. Obviously, large firms with large shares of the market have lower production costs and could be in a position to pass that on to farmers. On the other hand, they might manage that production to their benefit at the expense of farmers.

And the other thing that could happen — pesticide manufacturers, usually large chemical companies with many product lines, could decide that it's not worth the fight to preserve their label clearances and just go out of the pesticide business altogether. As this happens, the concentration of suppliers could become even more serious to the point where two or three giants would decide virtually all of the presticide output.

Farmers are already having problems finding suitable pesticides for some of the lesser crops — this trend could spread. They may wake up someday and find that chemical companies are no longer willing to produce important pesticides because it just isn't worth it. When that happens, we may all suffer from a reduced food supply

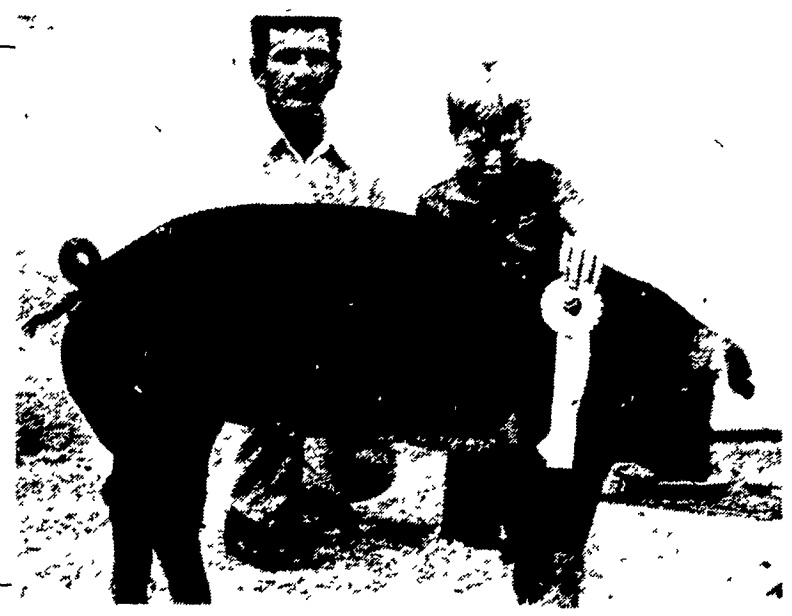
Julie Bow sold her champion crossbred market lamb for a record price of $2 per pound, to Dale Miller of the Lebanon Plaza Mall Association. The sheep shows at the Lebanon Fair begin on Wednesday at 5:30 p.m. Dairy goats will be shown on Monday at 3:30 p.m. along with the judging of the poultry exhibits.



Duroc hogs took both the champion and reserve champion honors at last year's Lebanon Fair, pictured is Dave Arnold's reserve champion that sold to Peoples National Bank for $3.05. Arnold's hog was second to the highest selling hog in the history of the fair at $6 per pound. Watch future issues of LANCASTER FARMING go to see if the hogs sold this year will break that record.

Wheat eligible for immediate entry

President signs repeal of interest waiver

WASHINGTON, D.C. — On July 23, President Ronald Reagan signed into law legislation repealing an interest waiver on 1981-crop wheat placed into the farmer-owned grain reserve, according to Secretary of Agriculture John R. Block.

The bill also extends the date for conducting the 1982-crop wheat referendum from August 1 until October 15, Block said.

"As I have said previously, repeal of the interest waiver clears the way for immediate entry of 1981-crop wheat into the reserve," Block said. "Therefore, farmers who place their 1981-crop wheat under Commodity Credit Corporation loan may enter the wheat immediately into the reserve."

Producers placing wheat in the reserve will receive annual storage payments of 26½ cents per bushel, payable in advance, Block said. While interest on the loan will be charged during the first year the wheat is in the reserve, interest will be waived during the second and subsequent years of the reserve loan program, Block said. The current CCC loan interest rate is 14½ percent.

Under this program, farmers agree to keep their wheat in reserve until the national 5-day moving average market price for wheat is at or above the reserve trigger release level of $4.65 per bushel, or until the 3-year reserve loan matures. When the release level is triggered, farmers may take their grain out of the reserve without penalty.

If the market price continues above the trigger release level after the initial release period (the remainder of the month in which release is triggered plus one additional month), farmers will stop earning storage payments. Interest charges, if previously stopped, will resume.

Although the call level for 1981-crop wheat is also $4.65 per bushel, Block said that only under an "extreme emergency" would he require farmers to take their grain out of the reserve when the call level is reached.

Earlier crop wheat now in other farmer-held reserves may be transferred into this new wheat reserve, Block said. Wheat in these older loans may not be held in the reserve for more than five years from the date the commodity was first placed in reserve, he said.

Current legislation provides that the maximum number of bushels of wheat in all farmer-held reserve at any one time is 700 million bushels. As of July 1, reserve wheat totaled 360 million bushels.

USDA revises policy for identifying problem meat plants

NEW YORK, N.Y. — The U.S. Department of Agriculture will no longer designate federally-inspected meat and poultry plants as "problem" or "chronic problem," according to Donald L. Houston, administrator of USDA's Food Safety and Inspection Service.

Houston said USDA is taking this action because there are other enforcement actions available that are sufficient to enforce inspection regulations. The other actions include regular reviews by federal meat and poultry inspectors and withdrawing inspection service

"USDA will continue to undertake legal proceedings in those few instances where normal controls cannot achieve compliance with inspection regulations," Houston said

Primary responsibility for in-plant enforcement lies with the inspector regularly assigned to each of the 7,000 meat and poultry plants.

"In addition, USDA compliance officers conduct nationwide reviews which will continue under the policy change," Houston said. "They are designed to measure the likelihood of individual plants distributing adulterated or misbranded products and assess the overall effectiveness and uniformity of inspection programs nationwide."

A notice concerning the revised procedures was published in the July 28 Federal Register, available in many public libraries.

Farm Bureau reviews grain situation

DES PLAINES, Il. — A conference to review the current grain situation and marketing strategies has been scheduled for August 20 in Des Plaines by the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Program for the one-day meeting is keyed primarily to the interests of grain producers and handlers with emphasis on national and international markets, transportation and storage, says Robert Delano, AFBF president, who will chair the sessions.

The international significance of the grain trade will be analyzed by two key speakers — Saturnino Zemborain, agricultural counselor of the Argentine Republic Embassy, Washington, D.C., and Tom Hammer, deputy under-secretary for international affairs and commodity programs, U.S. Department of Agriculture.

General marketing strategies will be discussed by Jim Gill, marketing specialist for the Illinois Agricultural Association, and Dean Brown, director of AFBF's feed grains, soybeans and wheat department.

Economic impact of proposed new farm program legislation will be the topic for Ross Korves, research economist for AFBF.

Richard Briggs, vice president of the Association of American Railroads, and John Jefferson, of the Indiana Farm Bureau Co-op Association, will handle grain transportation issues.

A panel discussion moderated by Harold J. Hartley, director of AFBF's commodity division, will look into the growing problem of grain warehouse and elevator bankruptcies. Panelists are Jerry Quick, attorney for Illinois Agricultural Association; Alvin Oliver, executive vice president, National Grain and Feed Association; and Ray Lett, executive assistant to the secretary, USDA.

All sessions of the conference are open.

Farm financial picture looks brighter in 1980's

WASHINGTON, D.C. — What are the financial prospects for the farm sector over the next 10 years?

With agriculture's future tied so closely to other domestic and foreign developments, there aren't any sure answers. But even while admitting that uncertainties abound, many economists see the 1980's as a growth decade.

Although growth may start slowly and may not touch all segments of farming, the overall picture is one of increased strength and profitability for U.S agriculture, says Dean Hughes and Stephen Gabriel, two finance analysts of USDA's Economics and Statistics Service

Behind that outlook are expectations that rising foreign demand will provide steadily expanding export markets. At the same time, a sustained recovery in the U.S. economy could touch off renewed growth in consumer incomes — spurring demand for red meats.

The analysts also project that the annual rate of inflation will turn down from recent high levels and may slow even further as 1990 approaches. That's a dramatic reversal from the steady acceleration in the inflation rate since 1950, and it has major implications for the farm sector.

The alternative — continued acceleration in the inflation rate — could fuel unparelleled increases in farm production costs That would probably force major adjustments in the way U.S. farming is organized and would almost certainly lead to greater government involvement in agriculture.

A Slow Starter

Even with an improving economy, Hughes and Gabriel expect relatively slow growth in net farm income until the mid-1980's. This year should be an exception, but the increase will probably look impressive only in comparison with last year's drought-reduced income.

After 1981, the projections indicate that gradual — but steady — gains in the farm sector's gross income will be largely offset by rising production expenses, which will generally keep pace with the inflation rate throughout the economy.

Thus, net farm income may grow at an average annual rate of only 4-5 percent between 1982 and 1985. If the analysts' projections turn out to be accurate, the inflation rate will be somewhat higher than this, so farmers will still be losing ground in purchasing power.

However, in the second half of the decade, net farm income could start to grow rapidly with mounting export demand, a slowing inflation rate, and higher consumer incomes.

In fact, Hughes and Gabriel foresee net farm income growing at about double the average annual rate of the early 1980's. The acceleration in farm income, while inflation continues to moderate, would give farmers substantial gains in purchasing power. Farm income could actually be rising faster than income in the nonfarm sector.

For the decade as a whole, farm production expenses could increase by an additional $240 billion above 1980's estimated $132 billion. However, gross farm income is expected to increase even more.

The result: Net farm income may more than double by 1990 Even after adjusting dollar figures for the projected inflation rate, farmers' purchasing power would increase by a tenth over the 10-year period.

What About Assets and Debts?

Net income isn't the only measure of farmers' financial status. Assets, debts, and the relationship between the two are important as current income to agriculture's financial well-being

While it took two centuries for U.S. agriculture to accumulate 1980's $1 trillion ($1,000 billion) in assets, it may take only another decade to triple that figure. Real estate values may grow at an average rate of about 14 percent a year through 1990, accounting for most of the increase in assets.

This will add to the wealth of landowners and make it more difficult for new farmers to get started. Also, higher land prices will greatly increase the need for borrowing to refinance the ownership of land as it is consolidated among fewer and fewer owners.

Partly for this reason, farm debt will continue to grow, perhaps passing the $600 billion mark by 1990 — more than three times the level of December 31, 1980.

While farm debts as a percentage of assets may rise to near 20 percent in the mid-1980's, the ratio will probably drop closer to recent 17-18 percent levels as farm incomes accelerate in the latter part of the decade

The strong competition for loan funds to meet the spiraling capital needs of agriculture will impose heavy demands on farm credit markets. But Hughes and Gabriel expect that the profitability and promising outlook of the farm sector will enable it to compete successfully with other sectors of the economy for the funds it needs.

In fact, a greater share of the financing will probably come from commercial money markets. Government's share of total farm debt, which grew from 6 percent 5 years ago to 14 percent today, may decline to about 9 percent by the end of this decade.

However, both analysts are quick to admit that many factors could alter their optimistic projections. For example, slow growth in exports or a sluggish domestic economy coupled with higher than expected inflation would continue to squeeze farm incomes.

Such conditions could lead to greater government involvement in agriculture. Why? Private lenders would probably limit their commitments to agriculture, while farm debt could build to as much as $1 trillion by 1990.

The generally optimistic outlook for the farm sector is now without its trouble spots, however.

Financing problems may be particularly acute in the next few years when farm income growth may be sluggish and many far-

Take time to transport equipment safely

KEWANEE, Il. — With a busy harvest season coming up, this is a good time to review safety precautions for transporting farm equipment. Often farmers become pressed for time and try to move equipment without taking proper precautions. They believe they'll save time, but this is when accidents most often occur.

Ron Birr, Kewanee Machinery Division Manager of Engineering Administration, and Howard Hadler, Kewanee Division Engineer, suggest that awareness is a vital factor in preventing equipment transport accidents.

"Be especially aware of equipment width and height when transporting," says Birr. "Towing a tall auger or grain elevator is dangerous unless the equipment is lowered and locked into transport position. The taller the equipment, the more unstable it is likely to be.

"It is also important to watch for overhead obstructions such as wires, low overpasses or bridges and tree branches," he adds.

"The most common obstacles to towing wide machinery are gates, narrow driveways and bridges," says Birr. "Wide winged implements such as disks, cultivators or mulchers can be unstable and a hazard if transported in the open position. Folded, they give the farmer a narrower, more compact piece of equipment to tow."

"Never use makeshift arrangements to tow or transport equipment," warns Hadler. "Always follow the manufacturer's instructions for transport and be sure equipment is under control at all times.

"In any move, on or off the road, loads should be carried as low as possible for stability. Before taking off with a tow, make sure that the hitch pin is secure and can't accidentally work out of the hitch," Hadler states.

When moving machinery on public roads or highways, Birr reminds farmers to note all posted clearance heights and widths. "Knowing ahead of time that your 16' disk won't make it across a 15' wide bridge can save a lot of time and trouble," remarks Birr.

"Remember to use safety warnings that alert other motorists," he adds. "This includes displaying a slow moving vehicle (SMV) sign on the back and using flashing lights to warn of slow movement."

"Keep your eyes open for holes and bumps in the road that could throw you or tip the machine," adds Hadler. "It is very important to use the seat belts in a tractor with ROPS (Roll Over Protective Structure)." In case of an accident, the operator will remain safe inside the protected cab.

"Be award of how much space you are taking up on the roadway. Don't interfere with other motorists and watch for obstructions on the side of the road when traveling close to the edge," Hadler warns.

Hadler also warns against allowing anyone to hitch a ride on a piece of towed equipment, even for a short distance. "There are no provisions for riders on equipment that is being towed. But a rider could be severely injured or killed if he falls or is jolted off the machinery."

"The key to preventing accidents is taking the time to be careful and being award of possible problems, says Birr. "By following manufacturers instructions, paying attention to details and avoiding 'short cuts', we can protect ourselves and our equipment from injury," summarizes Birr.

Lou Moore looks at the 1981 grain harvest

UNIVERSITY PARK — The first corn crop report of the season reveals a surprisingly low prospect for the 1981 harvest this fall. The harvest forecast of 7.12 billion bushels is about 7 percent above last year's drought reduced havest but much below earlier expectations, reports H. Louis Moore, Penn State ag economist.

It was estimated that a crop of about 7.7 billion bushels was needed to relieve the tight supply situation which has existed for the last year. The current estimate was based on conditions that existed on the nation's farms on July 1.

Many of the major corn states expect their yields per acre to be below a year ago. Substantial drops are expected in Ohio and Indiana where planting was delayed by extremely wet weater during the planting period. Ohio expects an average yield of 85 bushels per acre compared to 113 a year ago and 115 in 1979. Indiana expects an average yield of 82 bushels per acre compared in 96 in 1980 and 112 in 1979.

The National average yield is expected to be about 96 bushels compared to only 91 last year as a result of the drought. The record harvest was 109.7 bushels per acre in 1979.

The nation's farmers expect to harvest about 74 million acres, up about 1.5 percent from 1980. Pennsylvania's acreage for grain harvest, up about 50,000 acres or 4 percent, is projected to reach a record 123.7 million bushels, up more than 27 percent from a year ago. Pennsylvania farmers expect corn yields to be about 93 bushels per acre.

However, weather conditions may cause substantial revisions in monthly crop reports during the remainder of the growing season.

While there is a concern about whether there will be adequate supplies of corn and soybeans in 1981, wheat will be abundant. The nation's farmers expect to harvest 80.7 million acres of wheat in 1981, up 14 percent from last year.

Excellent growing conditions in most wheat growing areas will result in the biggest wheat crop the nation has ever harvested. The 1981 harvest is forecast at 2.81 billion bushels, up 19 percent from last year and up 32 percent from the 1979 crop. All but 7 of the 41 wheat growing states expanded wheat acreage for the 1981 harvest.

Pennsylvania farmers planted 270,000 acres to wheat last fall, up 20,000 from the previous year. The harvest, now underway, is expected to reach 10.3 million bushels, up 1 million bushels or 11 percent from 1980.

If corn crop conditions do not improve from the July estimate, sizable amounts of wheat are likely to be utilized as livestock feed during the coming year. The U.S. is anxious to increase wheat exports in the months ahead but the increase will not come easily. Other major wheat producing nations are harvesting bumper crops, too.

Financial picture

mers' debts are rising faster than assets.

Livestock producers are foremost among those with potential credit problems. Cattle feeders and hog and broiler producers are particularly vulnerable when production expenses are rising rapidly.

The specialized, production-intensive, low-liquidity nature of their assets limits their financial options — and their ability to cut costs by adjusting production — when times are tough. Their outlook depends greatly on the uncertainties of international markets and weather in determining feed costs.

Crop producers and cattle ranchers may be better able to finance difficult years because their operations are more land-intensive. With rising real estate values, lenders are more willing to refinance burdensome debts.

However, this may not be true for farmers already carrying large debt loads—especially beginning farmers. They may find it difficult to repay loans while interest rates remain relatively high and current returns low.

Many small farmers are in a similar situation. Debt will probably increase fastest for small poultry, tobacco, and cotton farms. The concentration of these farms in the southeast may make that regional particularly vulnerable to income fluctuations.

However, new and small farmers with dependable outside income sources might find the next few years a good time to get started or expand — before accelerating returns attract additional competition and further spur land values.

As a group, the largest farms typically carry the highest debts in relation to assets, and some may face short-term cash flow problems. Nevertheless, they'll again be the big winners in the next decade.

Economists foresee substantial further concentration of wealth on established farms with large real estate holdings. Small farms may account for only about 10 percent of total farm sector equity by 1990, half their current share.

Sweet time awaits fair visitors

GAITHERSBURG, Md — Visitors at the 1981 Montgomery County Fair, August 24-29, will have an opportunity to learn about the various ways bees contribute to agribusiness.

Indirectly, bees perform an invaluable function in the pollination of many crops and plants.

Directly, products from bees are used in the production of many valuable economic goods.

"Bees are critical to agribusiness as many crops are dependent upon them for pollination in order to produce fertile seeds," says Arthur Strang, superintendent of the Honey and Beeswax department.

"Crop yield can be drastically reduced if there aren't enough bees for pollination. Many farmers throughout the world rent colonies of bees to ensure the best possible harvest."

Honey is used in many food products, cosmetics and medicine. Many people prefer honey as a natural sweetener as an alternative to sugar.

Honey lovers will have an opportunity to buy some of the finest honey produced at the fair.

Beeswax is used widely in a variety of ways, including candle making.

Among the various displays in the Honey and Beeswax Department is an educational layout with pictures of worker bees and illustrations of the honey-making process. The display depicts the complex process bees must go through to produce honey — from constructing the honeycomb, gathering nectar from flowers to the final stage of manufacturing the honey.

A replica of a 200-year-old dome-shaped skep (beehive) discovered in a Monastary in Europe also will be on display.

Early beekeepers used twisted straw to construct skeps which were about 2 feet high. Upon completion, they added a colony of bees.

Many of the Third World countries still use this type of skep, however wooden boxes with slats are used exclusively in the United States because the slats can be removed in order to collect the honey and then replaced for another crop. Unlike wooden boxes,the straw skep has to be cut in order to remove the honey and another one rebuilt in its place

Any one interested in participating in the Honey and Beeswax Exhibit must bring their entries on Sunday, August 23 between 2 p.m. and 6 p.m. For additional information contact Arthur Strang, Exhibition Superintendent, 16 Chestnut St. Gaithersburg, Md. 20760. or call (301) 926-3100

PGC announces dove, woodcock seasons

HARRISBURG — Dates of hunting seasons and bag limits for doves, rails, gallinules, snipe and woodcock for 1981 have been established by the Pennsylvania Game Commission.

The framework for seasons and limits is set up by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Washington following annual surveys of breeding populations. States then select dates for seasons within the federal framework.

For 1981, the Pennsylvania season of 70 half-days for doves will open on Tuesday, September 1, and will close on Monday, November 9. The daily limit will again be 12, with a possession limit of 24 after the first day of the season.

This year the season on sora and Virginia rails and gallinules will again coincide with the dove season, opening on September 1 and closing on November 9. There is no open season on king and clapper rails in Pennsylvania.

The daily bag and possession limit is 25 on sora and Virginia rails, singly or in the aggregate of the two species. The daily limit on gallinules is 15, with not more than 30 in possession after the first day of the season.

In 1981 the woodcock season will open on Saturday, October 17, and continue through Saturday, December 19. This year's daily bag limit on woodcock remains at 5, with a possession limit of 10 after the first day.

The season for common (Wilson's) snipe also opens on Saturday, October 17, and will continue through Saturday, December 19. The daily bag limit on snipe is 8, with a possession limit of 16.

Daily shooting hours for rails, gallinules, snipe and woodcocks are from one-half hour before sunrise until sunset. The daily shooting hours for doves are from 12 o'clock noon until sunset.

A federal migratory bird hunting stamp (duck stamp) is not required to hunt doves, rails, gallinules, snipe or woodcock.

★ GP-83 cow by an Elevation son. Another easy potential VG, she has +1400 ETA and is from a 24,000-lb. dam. Contract potential.

★ GP-82 cow making over 20,000m from a VG 20,000-lb. dam.

Sale Manager's Note: Due to a shortage of help the Atwoods have decided to sell most of the milking herd and a few choice bred heifers. Together we picked 70 head from about 100 cows and heifers that are right from the top of the herd. Any blemished or problem cows are not selling — only the best This herd is extremely good uddered with excellent feet & legs. They are not pushed for high production, although several cows selling have records over 18,000m. Milking herd consists mostly of 1st, 2nd, and 3rd calf animals. This sale offers a unique opportunity to buy fall milk, from good, honest, sound cattle at farmer-breeder prices. Plan to be on hand sale day — you'll be glad you did.
